New District Taxes To Total $9,500,000 Set by Hill Leaders

Increase of 25c In Property Rate And 1c Gasoline Boost Included

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Capitol District leaders yesterday announced a $9,500,000 program of new taxes for congressional action.

Part of a sweeping plan to balance Washington's budget, the program also calls for a four million dollar boost in the Federal contribution and a $2,500,000 cut in present spending plans.

The program calls for these new taxes:

A 25-cent increase in the present property tax rate of $1.75 per hundred dollars of assessed valuation, to raise an estimated four million dollars additional a year.

Broadening the present District income tax law to make an estimated 120,000 residents, who now escape the levy by claiming a legal domicile elsewhere, pay about $3,100,000 a year.

A 1-cent increase in the present gasoline tax rate of 3 cents per gallon to net an additional $1,600,000 a year for the city's highway fund.

A 25 per cent increase in present water rates to produce an estimated $800,000 additional revenue a year for the city water fund.

Of the proposed four million dollar flat increase in the present eight million dollar Federal payment to the District, three million would go to the general fund, and one million to the water fund.

No provision was made for a sales tax.

The program was approved late yesterday by a majority of the House District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee headed by Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), by House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) and by Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.). Chairman of the Senate District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee.

They announced the program had the approval of District Commissioners. Dirksen's committee is slated to act on it tomorrow. Cain said he would present it to his subcommittee shortly.

District Committee approval would send the tax program to the House floor. Dirksen said it would all be written into a single bill. Leaders hoped the tax bill would be ready for House action in Monday's District day.

Two million dollars of the proposed budget cut would come from construction, and the rest from operating expenses. This feature conflicts with statements by House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.), in charge of the budget, who has indicated little chance for cutting the budget.

As sent to the Capitol, the budget called for a 95-million-

Souvenir Hunters Asked to Return Crash Plane Parts

Souvenir hunters who stripped the wreckage of the Eastern Air Lines plane which crashed near Port Deposit, Md., last Friday, killing 53 persons, were urged last night to return their trophies to the Maryland State police.

Disappearance of "hundreds of parts" of the plane is hampering Government investigators seeking to determine the cause of the crash, police said in a seven-State broadcast over police lines. They asked particularly the immediate return of "the right elevator hinge and spar."

"It is vital that these parts, as well as all other parts taken, be returned immediately," said the message in teletype.

War Is 'Tragic, Stupid Folly,' Eisenhower Tells Cadet Class

West Point, N. Y., June 3 (AP).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today told 130 fledgling second lieutenants, the 151st graduating class of the United States Military Academy, that "war is mankind's most tragic and stupid folly."

"To seek or advise its deliberate provocation is a black crime against all men," declared the Chief of Staff in a commencement address.

"For Americans, only threat to our way of life justifies resort to conflict; but once engaged in such defense, the country will look to you for the skill, the heart and the brain to lead her surely to victory."

Eisenhower, graduated from West Point in 1915, said "relative security only is possible through the strength of arms.

"The true soldier of America, therefore, is a leader for world cooperation, knowing that to serve best the security of his country he must work for the cause of peace."

Hindu-Moslem Division Looms As India Acquires Self-Rule

London, June 3 (AP).—Britain announced today she would transfer power in India to the Indians this year on the basis of dominion status, and gave the people of the rich subcontinent the choice of partition or unity.

Partition into Hindu and Moslem states seemed inevitable. It was the principal theme of the new British Indian policy, announced simultaneously to the Indian people and in both houses of the British parliament after its acceptance by Indian political leaders.

Opposition Leader Winston Churchill placed the support of the Conservative Party behind the principle of temporary dominion status for India, whether as a united country or as separate states of Hindustan and Pakistan.

Guard Against Violence

It was a question, Churchill said, whether "any better way could be found of saving India from the blood bath which may be very near."

Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee, announcing the plan to Commons, indicated that steps would be taken to insure that the Indian community could make the decision without fear of bloodshed.

In New Delhi, vast preparations were under way against any outbreak of violence. Leaders of the three major factions—M. A. Jinnah for the Moslems; Jawaharlal Nehru for the Hindus and Baldev Singh for the Sikhs—appealed by radio to the people to maintain peace while the problems of the transition were worked out.

Action Before August

Agreement seemed general on the plan with which Britain intends to end her rule of more than 150 years over India's nearly 400 million people.

Legislation will be introduced at this session of the British Parlia-

Woman Slain Here; Husband, Mother Shot

A Washington housewife was shot dead and her husband and mother critically wounded in what police described as a triple shooting yesterday at 913 Perry pl. ne.

The dead woman was identified at Casualty Hospital as Mrs. Lulu Wright, 47, of the Perry pl. address.

Wounded, with a bullet wound below the right temple, was her husband, Henry Thompson Wright, 70, formerly a guard at the United States Treasury Department.

The third victim was identified as Mrs. Madge Fitzgerald, 69, mother of the dead woman. She was shot through the chest.

Pvt. Harry Lee of the Twelfth Police Precinct, reached the scene shortly after the shooting, at 5:30 p. m. yesterday. He said that initial investigation showed that Wright shot his wife and his mother-in-law when the latter stepped into the line of fire while attempting to intervene. He later shot himself.

The two women, neighbors said, were shot in the kitchen of the Wright home, an attractive stone-faced, brick twin house. Wright, himself, was found by police in the living room.

Mrs. Fitzgerald told detectives of the homicide squad that she was attempting to push her daughter out of the kitchen door when she herself was shot.

The daughter fell prostrate on the top level of the small, porch-like stoop, but the mother was able to walk to a chair there. She was removed to Casualty Hospital, still seated in a semiconscious slump in the chair.

The mother-in-law was shot in the chest, doctors said, and it was feared the bullet might be lodged in or dangerously near the spinal column. Mrs. Wright was shot once in the arm and fatally through the mouth. She was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital.

Wright shot himself, police said, just below the temple, the bullet coursing through the upper front

B-29 Fleet Leaves Andrews Field On Hop to Europe

By The Associated Press

The strategic air command sent a squadron of its globe-ranging B-29 bombers off to Europe yesterday on a 7500-mile transocean training flight.

Nine took off from nearby Andrews Field, Md., bound for Germany and then England.

A refueling stop will be made in the Azores and an overnight nonstop flight will follow to Giebelstadt, Germany. The squadron will proceed to England after three days in Germany. It is due to reach home about June 17.

10,000-Year-Old Spearheads Are Discovered in Virginia

By Charles J. Yarbrough
Post Reporter

Traces of a wandering Virginian who had so many flint spearheads he couldn't take 'em with him have been found in Southwest Virginia.

He was the much-traveled Folsom Man, roaming hunter who apparently made spearheads just to confuse archeologists. His skeletal remains have never been found, but he flourished and made spearheads about the time of the last Ice Age, 10,000 years ago.

Discovery of the "largest assemblage of fluted points" ever found in the East was made in the basin of the proposed Buggs Island reservoir on the Roanoke River, the Smithsonian Institution said yesterday.

Because the reservoir will inundate nearly 90,000 acres and eliminate archeological sites, the Smithsonian Institution, the Army Engineers and National Parks Service are making what discoveries and excavations time will allow.

Folsom Man had the archeologists crossed up for years. His characteristic flint work was first found in the Rocky Mountain areas 25 years ago and they had him pinned down to that region for a time. Since then, however, artifacts attributable to him have been found in many parts of the continent.

"He was presumably a wandering hunter with no fixed abode, but with camp sites to which he probably returned year after year," the Smithsonian said.

Carl F. Miller, of the Smithsonian, who made the find, reported 93 sites in the proposed reservoir area where "there were signs of habitation." Smithsonian archeologists have sought a Virginia Folsom site for 10 years.

Vandenberg Blasts Reds On Hungary

Post Reporter

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg warned yesterday that the United States might have to take the case of Hungary into the "forum of the United Nations."

The Senator made his suggestion in a speech from the floor urging prompt ratification of the peace treaties with Italy, Hungary, Romania and Bulgaria, which he helped to negotiate as a member of the American delegation.

He was thoroughly angry in his comments on the Communist seizure of power in Hungary, although he said it should not delay ratification of the Hungarian treaty.

He described the overturn in Hungary as a "treacherous conquest" and a "cynical illustration" of the Communist idea of democracy.

Stirs "Sense of Outrage"

He branded it as an apparent flouting of the Yalta agreement which stirs "a further sense of outrage" among the American people.

Flailing his arms and frequently hammering the air with a fistful of papers in his hand, he predicted that a "rigged election" would soon confirm Hungary's new status as a Soviet satellite.

The United States, he said, was not impotent in this situation; it could at least get the facts and if necessary submit them to the United Nations.

Although he did not say how he proposed to raise the matter, it was assumed that he meant action before the General Assembly next September under Article 14 of the Charter. This entitles any country to bring up any situation which threatens to impair good relations among nations.

Similar Threat by Marshall

At the recent Moscow conference Secretary Marshall delivered a similar threat in the case of Austria, saying that the United States might bring the plight of Austria before the Assembly in September if a four-power agreement could not be reached in the meantime.

There is still ample time for the United States to put both cases on the Assembly's agenda. An appeal to the Security Council on either issue is unlikely, since it could be checkmated by the Soviet veto there.

Vandenberg's comments yesterday carried additional weight because of his position as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The State Department was silent on Hungarian developments yesterday, although it was thought likely that Secretary Marshall would recommend suspension of the Export-Import Bank's credit of seven million dollars to Hungary for cotton purchases here.

Meantime the new Communist regime in Budapest ordered Ambassador Aladar Szegedy-Maszak to return from Washington for "consultations." A spokesman at the Hungarian Legation assumed the Ambassador would comply, ex-

7 of 9 Presidential Eligibles In Favor of Tax Cut Measure, Same Ratio for Labor Bill

Thirteen National Leaders Queried . . .

6 GOP Leaders Agreed on Both, Democrats Divided, Post Queries Find

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Of nine national leaders on most presidential possibility lists, seven want to see the tax bill become law and seven wish to see the labor bill enacted. Two think the tax bill should not become law and two believe the labor bill should not be approved.

Thirteen political figures widely regarded as possible candidates were queried by The Washington Post last Friday. Answers were received from six Republicans and from three Democrats. Only four did not reply.

The inquiry was sent to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Senator Robert A. Taft (R. Ohio), former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, Gov. Earl Warren of California, Senator John W. Bricker (R., Ohio), Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R., Conn.), Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.), former Vice President Henry Wallace, Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.), Ellis Arnall, former Governor of Georgia, and Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.).

Four Do Not Reply

Answers were not received from Governor Dewey, Governor Warren, Henry Wallace and Senator Lodge. Governors Dewey and Warren declined comment and Wallace, who is on a national speaking tour, could not be reached.

The Post wired each of the 13:

"Final action approaches on two of the most important measures before this Congress—the labor bill and the tax reduction bill. It is the wish of The Washington Post to assemble the views of national leaders on the issues raised by these two bills. Do you think the labor bill should or should not be finally enacted into law? Do you think the tax reduction bill as passed by the Senate should or should not be finally enacted into law? Your views on these two questions would be appreciated by The Post and, we believe, by the public . . ."

Without exception, the six Republican leaders who responded agreed both the tax reduction bill and the labor bill should become law. Stassen, while terming the tax bill "undesirable," said it is preferable to no bill at all. He suggested the President confer with congressional leaders and indicate the amount of cut he will accept. But if the President simply vetoes the present bill, Stassen favored passage over his veto.

The three Democrats who responded varied sharply in their views. Arnall thought the tax bill

Mines in South Demand End Of Portal Pay

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Southern coal operators yesterday revealed that they were proposing to John L. Lewis the abolition of portal to portal pay.

In return, however, they offered the United Mine Workers what amounted to a 10.6 cents an hour increase, or 85 cents more a day than they are now receiving.

As they framed their offer, however, the new rate would be for an eight-hour "production" day, paying only for time actually worked at the face of the coal seam. At present, the miners are being paid for a nine-hour day, including an average of one hour spent walking from the portal of the mine to the place of work.

In money terms, the Southern operators' offer appeared to be less than the 15 cents an hour proposal of the Northern producers. The latters' talks with Lewis broke up last Saturday, when the operators declared that Lewis' demand for raising the basic wage rate by 35 cents an hour was "unreasonable."

As distinct from the statement made on Saturday by the Northern mine owners, yesterday's disclosure of the situation in the Southern group's talks was not the sign of a general collapse in negotiations. The Southern operators, who produce about one fourth of the Nation's coal, and about one third of

Ready For President

Four-Billion Tax Slash Bill Passed by Senate, 48 to 28

The Senate yesterday completed congressional approval of the four-billion-dollar tax reduction, with a 48 to 28 final passage vote.

The ratifying count fell short of the two-thirds majority required to override an almost certain presidential veto.

President Truman is expected to receive the bill today. A parliamentary technicality held up immediate delivery of the legislation to the White House.

In the opinion of ranking Democrats, only the timing of the presidential veto remained in doubt. Some are known to have advised the White House against the "quick veto" strategy believed originally contemplated.

One Administration official took the view that the President should wait the full 10 days allotted him on the theory it would strengthen his factual case against the bill.

The delay strategy would bring the President into line with the postponement fight waged by Democratic opponents of the bill on both sides of the Capitol.

Senate Democrats had voted solidly to postpone any action until June 10 to give Republicans a chance to complete their appropriations record. They argued that unless a minimum of four billion dollars, the approximate cost of tax reductions, is shaved from appropriations, no tax cut is justified.

One Senate Democratic leader said the President may well argue in his veto message that cuts based on an intangible revenue outlook, Flood Breaks Dam Near Rutland, Vt.

BULLETIN

Rutland, Vt., June 3 (AP).—Two children were reported missing tonight as rain-swollen waters burst through the East Pittsford dam, leaving Rutland without drinking water and electric power and forcing the evacuation of 500 families.

Police Chief J. Fred Carbine said a National Guard company had been rushed to the area. Police blocked Rutland's three western exits because of the "extreme danger to human life caused by the rising waters."

House Vote Set for Today On Labor Bill

Amid growing speculation on whether President Truman will veto the labor bill, the House made ready to vote today on the final conference committee draft of the controversial measure.

In Democratic circles in Congress, the conviction was mounting that Mr. Truman would turn thumbs down on the legislation. The fact that he agreed yesterday to give an audience today to Democratic members of the House Labor Committee, who admittedly will urge a veto, was taken as evidence that the President was at least willing to hear arguments against his signing.

[The Associated Press last night quoted Senator Hatch (D., N. Mex.) as saying the threat of a new coal strike has increased the possibility that President Truman will sign the labor bill. Hatch talked with the President yesterday, but would not discuss their conversation.—Editor's Note.]

Meantime, Representative Case (R., S. Dak., a vigorous advocate of strong labor legislation, told the House:

"If any political lieutenants of the President or any so-called leaders of labor brandish old hackneyed phrases about vicious or drastic labor legislation, browbeat the President into vetoing this bill as it now comes to us, the American people will have witnessed a bunch of gangsters entering the White House and holding up the President with a wooden gun."

The conference committee bill, and a report from the House members of the conference group, explaining the changes which had been made, was filed with the House late yesterday.

Truman Invites Senate's Big Six To Parley Today

President Truman has asked the four Republican and two Democratic leaders of Congress—known as the "big six"—to meet with him at the White House at 10 a. m. today.

It was indicated by Administration sources that the discussions will center on extension of certain of the President's wartime powers.

Republican members of the big six are: Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, Senate president pro tempore; Senator Wallace H. White, jr., of Maine, Senate majority leader; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, Speaker of the House; and Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, House majority leader. Democratic members are Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Senate minority leader, and Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas, House minority leader.

Rees Bill for Loyalty Check Would Affect 42,000 Workers

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Full-scale FBI investigations would have to be made of 42,000 people on the Federal pay roll under the Rees loyalty bill, the House Civil Service Committee was told yesterday.

But under the President's proposed loyalty program, the committee was informed, between 32,000 and 35,000 would be given detailed investigations.

The witness was Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming, who emphasized that he didn't mean to imply that all of the 42,000 were disloyal.

"We believe," he said, "that derogatory information will be found in Government files on about 42,000 present employes. We have no way of estimating how many of these people will be found disloyal and ordered fired from the service."

Both the Rees bill and the President's program provides a full FBI field inquiry to be made of each employe where derogatory data is available. The difference in estimates is based on the fact that the Rees bill would include 175,000 part-time employes. The President's plan exempts this group. Fleming said a survey revealed that derogatory information is held on 2.8 per cent of the Federal workers.

The President's plan was supported by both Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission and Flemming, his GOP colleague. Mitchell said the Rees bill would be more cumbersome and costly. Later on, Flemming estimated the Rees plan would cost about 37 million dollars a year compared with 25 million dollars for the President's plan.

He said the difference in estimated costs is based on a provision in the Rees plan which would compel the Government to make a detailed check on past employers and school records of Federal workers. It was Flemming's opinion that it wouldn't be worth while to do this in the cases of employes of long service.

Flemming also opposed that provision in the Rees bill which would give the proposed Civil Service loyalty board the power to hear all loyalty cases and to dictate action to be taken, if any, against the employes involved. He estimated the board would be called on to handle 62,000 cases in its first year, and he warned that the program would prove too heavy to handle.

The witness again warned the committee that the Supreme Court had repeatedly upheld the right of agency heads to hire and fire and he said he doubted if this authority could be delegated to Civil Service

Ward Threatens 'Secession' In Richmond Charter Fight

Richmond, Va., June 3 (AP).—Richmond, where in 1861 the Virginia General Assembly adopted the act of secession and which became the capital of the Confederacy, faced—with tongue in cheek—a secession threat of its own today.

The Jefferson Ward Citizens Association has passed a resolution calling for the "secession of Jefferson Ward from the City of Richmond and the establishment of the City of Jefferson City, Va."—if Richmond adopts a charter change that would do away with the present bicameral-mayor form of government in favor of a unicameral-city manager plan.

City Councilman Emmett E. Perkinson, association president, said today it doesn't "plan to do anything" with the resolution unless Richmond voters approve the change in a November 4 referendum.

However, should the voters favor the change, Perkinson declared, his association will ask the General Assembly for a charter for a separate city.

The resolution declared citizens of Jefferson Ward—one of the four wards in the city, embracing St. John's Church, where Patrick Henry made his "Give me liberty or give me death" speech—"see in the charter proposed for the City of Richmond, in the creation and espousal of which they had no official representation whatsoever, a desire and an attempt to deprive them of their duly elected representatives" in the proposed unicameral form of government.

The resolution referred to the proposed new government as "the threatened era of despotic and dictatorial class government. . . ."

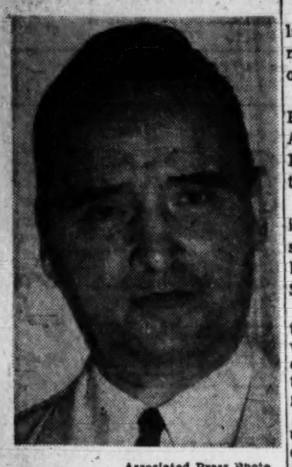

Perkinson declined to state the membership of the citizens' association but said organization is continuing.

Hemisphere Talks On Defense Near

OSCAR IVANISSEVICH, Argentine Ambassador, pictured at the White House yesterday after conference with President Truman on differences between the United States and Argentina

U. S. at Last Ready For Parley at Rio, Argentina Advised

The United States is willing at last to start "consultations" on a new mutual defense pact with the other American republics.

This assurance was given by President Truman yesterday to Argentine Ambassador Oscar Ivanissevitch during a half-hour's talk at the White House.

Their conversation took place in the presence of Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Acheson, but without Assistant Secretary Spruille Braden.

Neither the White House nor the Ambassador would say whether this meeting marked the ending of the long dispute between the United States and the Peron government in Buenos Aires.

A White House statement issued after the meeting, however, clearly foreshadowed the early summoning of the long-delayed conference on hemisphere defense at Rio de Jeneiro.

The wartime Chapultepec conference at which Argentina promised to rid herself of Nazi agents, provided for a permanent defense agreement to be negotiated as quickly as possible after the war.

The Rio conference has been postponed repeatedly because of the United States' contention that Argentina had not yet lived up to its promises. The White House statement was careful not to say that Argentina had or had not complied.

Text of Statement

Here is the text of the statement:

"The Argentine Ambassador, who has just returned from Argentina, reviewed with the President and the Secretary of State the steps which his government has taken and is continuing to take in fulfilment of its commitments undertaken in the final act of the Inter-American Conference on Problems of War and Peace at Chapultepec.

"He expressed the views of his government that no obstacle remained to discussion looking toward the treaty of mutual assistance contemplated by the Act of Chapultepec.

"The President indicated his willingness to renew the consultations with the governments of the other American republics initiated by the United States memorandum of April 1, 1945, on this subject."

Presumably the Ambassador told of the recent expulsions of Nazi agents from Argentina, which Foreign Minister Bramuglia later said represented full compliance with his country's promises.

Others to Be Consulted

There has been no statement from the United States, however, to indicate whether these measures are regarded here as full compliance. Other American republics, it is assumed, will be asked for their views on this point before the Rio conference can be summoned.

As usual whenever Argentine relations have been discussed lately, there was renewed speculation yesterday about Braden's future in the State Department. He has been an uncompromising foe of the Peron government, and has insisted repeatedly on full and whole-hearted compliance by Argentina as a prerequisite to a new hemisphere defense treaty.

He is known to have disapproved of President Truman's recent message calling for the sale of arms to Latin American republics, and has never been disposed to take Peron's assurances at their face value.

The general belief yesterday was that Braden would resign this summer; that Ambassador George S. Messersmith in Buenos Aires would also resign or be transferred elsewhere, and that Secretary Marshall would enter the Rio negotiations with a clean slate of new advisers.

Marshall Asks U. S. Military Missions

Unless the United States sends military missions to foreign countries "some other nation will," Secretary of State Marshall told Congress yesterday.

Testifying before the House Armed Services Committee, Marshall said these training missions "could not in any sense be described as military units nor could they conceivably be considered as expeditionary forces."

The committee is studying legislation to authorize the President to send advisory military missions to countries which request them.

The missions, Marshall said, would be very small and would act only for training. They would not, he said, serve as sources of military intelligence. To do that, he added, would "create/ suspicion."

As to whether such a move would result in any ill feeling on the part of Russia, Marshall replied to a question by Representative Arends (R., Ill.):

"No more so than they have now with respect to our mission in China."

He could not specify, he said, how many missions would be sent, though several countries have asked for them. The mission to China, he said, would be continued.

In addition the United States now has a mission in Iran, which Marshall said was "doing an outstanding job."

He pointed out that it was "traditional policy" of the United States to aid nations of the Western Hemisphere to maintain their independence. Also, he said, such aid to other nations would be "in the interest of national security."

"Developments during the course of the war," Marshall said, "have emphasized the strategic importance of the Near, Middle and Far East regions, the component countries of which are in a state of intense political, social and economic readjustment. Some have just emerged from the conditions of conquered countries, others have been only recently released from the condition of semi-subject peoples under the mandate system. Many of them need educational and technical assistance to increase their stability and security."

An effort to secure committee approval of the measure without further hearings was blocked by Representative Short (R., Mo.) who objected to immediate action. It was then referred to a subcommittee for further study.

Compton Report Spurs House To Set Hearings on Training

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The House Armed Services Committee agreed yesterday to begin hearings within 10 days on universal military training, termed essential to national security by a civilian commission.

The Senate Armed Services Committee will meet today to decide what action it should take.

Long moribund as a legislative issue, universal training had new life pumped into it by the commission's unanimous report made public Monday. Further attention was focused on the issue yesterday by Dr. Karl T. Compton, head of the commission, who telegraphed Chairman Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House committee that the present world situation was "too serious to justify delay."

Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an atomic scientist, is slated to be the first witness before the House committee.

In his telegram, Compton said Congress should "tackle the problem promptly and courageously."

"There is no certainty," he declared, "that intrigue backed with force has been abandoned as an instrument for national aggrandizement,and unhappily the present actual evidence in some quarters points otherwise.

"If anyone impressed our commission on universal training more than the wide implication of this problem, it was the positive value for peace of adopting a military training program and the great risk in not doing so.

"The international future is still obscure despite our ardent hope and effort for the success of the United Nations as an effective instrumentality to insure peace."

In spite of the abrupt reawakening of the universal training issue, there appeared little chance that any legislation could be enacted at this session of Congress. Not only is the calendar loaded, but only legislation of the most extreme urgency could be pushed through the routine of hearings, committee action and debate in the six weeks or so before the summer Congressional vacation, and not all legislators, by any means, see this issue as one of emergency.

However, if committee action could be completed between now and the recess date, the legislation would be on the calendar for consideration soon after Congress reconvenes.

Several bills embodying the machinery for universal military training have been introduced, among them one which very closely meets the recommendations of the Compton commission. Andrews said his committee would not confine its hearings to any one measure but to the subject in general.

U. N. May Get Hungary Coup

plaining that such "consultation" with Ambassadors was usual when a new government took charge.

Senator Vandenberg's speech yesterday opened a three-day debate in the Senate over ratification of the Italian and satellite treaties. A vote is expected by 2 p. m. tomorrow, and indications yesterday were that the treaties would get the necessary two-thirds majority.

The first day's debate, however, showed a number of Senators anxious to postpone ratification, in addition to the small but vehement group wanting rejection of the treaties, chiefly on anti-Soviet grounds. Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.), usually a supporter of the Administration's foreign policies, was one of those who argued for postponement.

Vandenberg himself echoed former President Herbert Hoover in his impatience over the tactics of the Soviet government.

"We cannot wait too much longer for Soviet cooperation and consent in stabilizing western and central Europe," said Vandenberg, although such agreement is "still infinitely preferable."

"The rest of us are entitled to just as much voluntary freedom of action on our side of the iron curtain as the Soviets and their satellites have assumed, often coercively.

"We cannot wait indefinitely to stabilize relationships with those who substantially think alike—and this includes the control of atomic energy. Patience is still a virtue, but not forever, particularly when time runs against us."

Some day, said Vandenberg, there would be settlements with Germany and Austria—"even if, unhappily, we are forced by circumstances to organize peace in our own zones alone."

Nevertheless, Vandenberg insisted that rejection or postponement of the Italian and satellite treaties would not serve American interests. Rejection, he warned, would be America's responsibility alone, and defects in the treaties could not be removed by unilateral American action.

"You can imagine, for example, what would happen in the potentially explosive boundary areas between Yugoslavia and Italy, the cockpits of white-hot controversy," he said, "if the United States drew one boundary line, and if Soviet Russia drew another, or if we procrastinate and jointly draw none at all.

"You can imagine what would happen if we unilaterally try to give Trieste to Italy, as was our wish, while Soviet Russia unilaterally tries to give Trieste to Yugoslavia, as was her wish, or if we leave it all in angry flux."

Delay in retifying, he warned, would be bad for Italy and for Europe, since it would perpetuate confusion and uncertainty. It would require the continued presence of American troops in Italy and give greater scope to Communist propaganda against American good faith.

Similarly, he argued, rejection or postponement of the Hungarian treaty would not help the situation in central Europe. He reminded the Senate that the Hungarian treaty provided for the withdrawal of Soviet occupation troops within ninety days. Such withdrawal, Vandenberg contended, would give the anti-Communist people of Hungary a greater chance to win back their democratic liberties.

The case against immediate ratification was stated by Fulbright, who offered a motion to postpone further consideration of the treaties until January 25, 1948. The Senate must first dispose of this motion before it can vote on the treaties themselves.

Fulbright said he proposed delay because of the "renewed expansion of the Communists, as exemplified by their action in Hungary." On the basis of what has happened in Hungary, he predicted, Senate ratification of the treaties "would create the same situation in Italy" and the Communists would seize control there.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) suggested delay in ratifying the Italian treaty until more progress has been made with Russia on a settlement with Germany.

Senators Eastland (D., Miss.) and Wherry (R., Neb.) questioned Vandenberg sharply about the reparations clauses of the Italian treaty.

"Does the Senator place any confidence in Mr. Stalin or Mr. Tito?" asked Eastland.

"So far as I am concerned," Vandenberg answered, "Mr. Stalin and Mr. Tito are unavoidable parties to the treaty," and he added that 16 other allies were signatories.

"This is the best we can do," said Vandenberg, "unless Senators want to fight it out with them."

Wherry suggested Italy would seek a loan in the United States to enable her to pay reparations to Russia. Vandenberg retorted he knew of no loans made or contemplated to pay reparations, and explained that Italian reparations would be paid in labor rather than in resources or money.

The small group opposed to ratification will line up behind the Fulbright proposal for delay. The fate of this proposal, which may come to a vote today, will indicate the size of the majority for the treaties themselves.

While the Senate was debating the Italian treaty, Italian Ambassador Alberto Tarchiani visited Undersecretary of State Will Clayton to discuss economic help for Italy. He seemed confident on leaving, especially concerning Italy's early use of the 100 million dollar Export-Import Bank credit granted last January.

Chinese Reds Gain in Assault

Nanking, June 3 (AP).—Chinese government defenders of three key Manchurian Railway cities gave ground today before fierce assaults by six Communist divisions threatening to isolate Changchun, the capital.

Chinese press dispatches said the garrison of Changtu, hard-pressed city 70 miles northeast of Mukden on the Mukden-Changchun Railway, appeared to be "fighting a losing battle."

(The Chinese Communist radio in North China asserted that Communist troops seized Changtu Monday, killing or capturing 4000 remnants of that government's seventy-first army and allied units. The broadcast was heard by the Associated Press listening post in San Francisco.)

All telegraphic communications between Mukden and Changtu were broken. Mukden dispatches declared at least 20,000 Communist troops were attacking Changtu.

The situation was described as just as desperate at famed Szephingkai, 35 miles northeast of Changtu, and at Kaiyuan, a third railway center 15 miles southeast of Changtu.

Mukden dispatches said Communist Gen. Wan Yi was using six full divisions in the attacks on the triangular area.

The army-controlled Peace Daily asserted the government was striking back with its own guerillas deep inside Communist territory and had seized Hulan, 20 miles north of Harbin, Red headquarters in Manchuria.

Reds Planning To Oust Tildy In Hungary

By Jack Guinn

Budapest, June 3 (AP).—Hungary's new Communist-dominated government was reliably reported tonight to be planning to force the resignation of Centrist President Zoldman Tildy and order the recall of Hungarian diplomats abroad.

As Leftists tightened their control over the republic, additional members of former Premier Ferenc Nagy's government were said to have fled into exile in non-Communist countries.

[The United Press reported that Minister of Justice Istvan Ries announced today that approximately 10 per cent of the country's voters would be disenfranchised in a new electoral law to be presented to a special session of the National Assembly next Tuesday.

[The "voting reform," Ries said, would raise the age minimum for voters from 20 years to 22 and would exclude all former members of Fascist parties and all immediate members of families in which individuals had been condemned for war crimes or "crimes committed against democracy."

[Ries estimated the "reform" would deprive about 500,000 persons of the right to vote. In the 1945 election there were 5,164,661 registered voters.]

Tildy Reported Worried

An informed Hungarian source said that Tildy, a Methodist minister and colleague of Nagy in the Small Holders Party, was holding office on borrowed time.

The informant said Tildy had managed to look the other way during the pro-Russian bloodless coup d'etat last week, in which Nagy resigned while at a Swiss vacation resort. He added that the time was now running out and Tildy was considerably worried about his own future.

Other Hungarian political sources reported that Aldar Szegedy-Maszak, Minister at Washington, would be among the diplomats recalled soon to "report to the government."

Others who would be brought home include Paul Auer at Paris, who was prowestern before he left Hungary, and Ferenc Gordon, Minister at Bern, and a close friend of Nagy, the informants said.

An Allied diplomatic source confirmed that Bela Varga, a Catholic priest who was speaker of the house, had fled across the Russian zone of Austria and was now "in a safe place." Varga said Saturday he had learned that Communist leader planned to arrest him on charges of plotting against the government.

Another Priest Resigns

Another priest, the Rev. Istvan Balogh, secretary-general of the Small Holders Party, announced his resignation because of "ill health," the Smallholder newspaper Magyar Nemzet reported. The newspaper said that during the last few days, when Communist pressure became heaviest, Father Balogh had become "sicker and sicker."

The new premier, Lajos Dinnyes, Leftwing Small Holder, reportedly planned to appoint Erno Mihalyfi to replace Laszlo Jekely, Tildy's personal cabinet representative, who is minister of information and acting foreign minister.

Two Communists will head Dinnyes' press department, an announcement said.

Unconfirmed rumors were circulated that Minister of the Interior Laszlo Rajik, a Communist, planned to expel the foreign press as soon as the Hungarian peace treaty was ratified.

Text of Vandenberg Speech on Hungary

This is what Senator Vandenberg said, in part, about Hungary in his speech in the Senate yesterday:

THE treaty with Hungary has now virtually become in the last 10 days a treaty with another Soviet satellite. It potentially classifies itself now with the Bulgarian and Romanian treaties, which are with Soviet satellites.

As in the cases of Bulgaria and Romania, so also in the case of Hungary, it is necessary to have a treaty with this former enemy country, in order to end the state of war, regardless of what their internal status may be . . .

But recent developments in Hungary certainly add nothing but a further sense of outrage to the sensibilities of those Allied nations which, like America, will and must insist that peace with justice is the goal which we shall continue to pursue.

NOWHERE has the violation of the basic freedoms for which we were presumed to have been fighting World War II raised more definite implications of Moscow's influence in these unholy events or required more definite official inquiry to fix the facts. Otherwise, Yalta and Potsdam, to say nothing of the Atlantic Charter and the pledges of the U. N. are contemptuously flouted and their "scraps of paper" become relics of dishonor.

Ever since the Hungarian people voted by a large majority in favor of the so-called Smallholders Party and set up a coalition government, the Communist Party, mustering but 17 per cent of the popular vote, has been busy undermining the coalition government of which they were a nominal but treacherous part. Under what seems to have been the conspiring protection of occupying arms, this minority infiltrated the government and captured the police . . .

The familiar pattern of infiltration and internal sabotage once more appears to have "done its stuff." If the pattern runs true to form, Hungary will soon enjoy the further travesty of a rigged election to confirm these triumphs of Communist "democracy."

America cannot deal with Hungary as it deals with Greece. Hungary is a former enemy state. Greece is an ever-constant ally. Hungary is under armed occupation by Soviet troops pursuant to her rights under the terms of armistice. Greece is an independent state. Hungary cannot therefore ask or receive our aid in the Greek manner.

THEY are parallel cases but they cannot have parallel treatment. Yet this need not mute our voice. We need not be impotent. On the contrary, it should move us swiftly to demand the total facts. We cannot condone, by any sort of silence, what appears to be the treacherous conquest of a brave, exploited people whose independent autonomy appears to have been treacherously destroyed within a few short months by those same minorities which were overwhelmingly repudiated at the Hungarian polls.

This may become—if the facts justify these presumptions—a clear call to trial in the forum of the United Nations; and I repeat, if the facts justify these presumptions, it will become America's duty to sound that call.

This is no reason to reject the Hungarian or Italian treaty. It would demand rejection if that would help free Hungary, but it seems to me that all the facts argue to the contrary.

Ninety days after ratification of the treaty all foreign troops—which means all Soviet troops—must be withdrawn from Hungary except those necessary to protect so-called "lines of communication" between Russia and Austria. The exception is an unhappy one because the Soviets will measure this necessity to suit themselves.

On the other hand there is bound to be some degree of withdrawal, and it has been independently estimated at a minimum of 50 per cent. Whatever withdrawal occurs will represent vital relief for Hungary; will proportionately weaken military dictatorship; and proportionately relieve Hungarian autonomy. Here again we must assess the alternatives . . .

7 Presidential Possibilities In Favor of Tax, Labor Bills

should become law but wanted the labor bill rejected. Senator Byrd favored the labor bill but opposed tax reduction at this time. Senator Pepper said neither the tax cut nor labor bill should become law.

Here are the replies:

SENATOR VANDENBERG — "Answering your wire I most emphatically think the labor bill as reported by the conference committee and the tax bill as agreed upon in conference should become the law of the land. I think they represent effective and rational progress toward two essential objectives in the life of the Nation."

SENATOR TAFT—"I think the President should sign both bills."

SENATOR SALTONSTALL—"I certainly hope the President will sign both the tax reduction and labor management bills. In recent months I have always favored some form of tax reduction this year because it should give our economy a much needed shot in the arm.

"On the labor bill, I voted for such amendments as I thought would be helpful in our labor-management relations. It seems to me the bill as it came out of conference should be a fair and beneficial law to both sides."

FORMER GOV. STASSEN—"In direct answer to your specific questions it is my view that considered as a whole the conference report on a new national labor policy is a good bill, a moderate bill and should be enacted into law.

"It is clearly better than no law at all.

"It is definitely better than either the original Hartley bill or the original Taft-Ball bill.

"If administered with fairness, it will not injure sound, strong labor unions, will promote industrial peace, and will advance the general welfare of the workers and the people of America as a whole.

"My detailed position on labor legislation, based on our successful experience in Minnesota and a study of labor relations here and abroad for a number of years was presented in my testimony before the Senate Labor Committee on February 7. That testimony still represents my view. But I recognize that in a free country under a representative government no one can obtain exactly the kind of legislation he would individually prefer.

"It is encouraging that of the seven measures which I then urged should be avoided, none is in the final conference bill.

"These undesirable measures were, compulsory arbitration of disputes over future working conditions, compulsory labor courts with power of final decision of future working conditions, taking away the ultimate right to strike from any workers for private capital, banning maintenance of membership contracts, prohibiting industry-wide bargaining, permitting injunctions by private petition notwithstanding the Norris-LaGuardia Act, granting authority to draft strikers into the armed services.

"These seven bad proposals have all been defeated and left out of the bill.

"Of the 10 positive proposals which I made in my testimony, nine are included in substantial measures in the final bill, including provisions against jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, for financial reports and secret ballots of workers, no union of foremen, free speech for employes and improved mediation service under a separate division, with time to mediate before a strike.

"As to your second question on the tax measure it is and has been my announced view that a sound financial policy for America requires that the margin between estimated receipts at current tax rates and budgeted spending, one-half should be used for tax reduction on personal incomes and small business, and one-half should be used for payment on the debt.

"The present tax reduction measure goes beyond that point and is undesirable. The sensible solution of the deadlock between Congress and the President is for the President to confer with leaders of both parties in Congress, and to indicate the amount of the tax cut he will accept in terms of a horizontal adjustment of the present bill, and the prompt enactment of a new measure to carry out this compromise. If he does not wish to do this he should sign the bill, as the greatest inflationary dangers are past and a tax reduction slightly larger than desirable is better than no tax reduction at all. If the President vetoes the bill, it should be passed over his veto."

SENATOR BALDWIN—"I hope the President will sign both bills. I think they are fair and just. The tax bill grants reductions where a majority of the Senate thought they were needed most and where they would be most helpful in stimulating business and employment. The labor bill does not satisfy the extremes in either management or labor. I can understand how the leaders of labor would prefer that there be no legislation. On the other hand, this bill is designed to clear up the difficulties we have had in the past and to protect the general public by maintaining production and making it possible to more easily settle labor disputes."

SENATOR BRICKER — "The President should sign both the tax reduction bill and the labor bill for the good of the country. He should be very hesitant to substitute his own judgment for the judgment of Congress and the will of the people."

FORMER GOV. ARNALL—"The tax reduction bill should become law. Lower taxes assist in averting recession. Greater incentive for initiative is needed in the United States today.

"The labor bill should be rejected. Purpose of the measure is to break the back of organized labor. Organized labor has done much for the working man. Its gains should be protected. The labor bill does not offer a magic formula in the settlement of industrial controversies. In my judgment it will intensify them."

SENATOR BYRD—"I am in favor of the labor bill as agreed to in conference and am opposed to the tax reduction bill for reasons expressed in the Senate."

SENATOR PEPPER—"The labor bill reported by conference committee should not be finally enacted into law. It does not and cannot prevent strikes. It provides no solution to questions of settling wages, hours and working conditions in dispute between employers and labor organizations, which represented about 85 per cent of total time lost because of strikes in 1946. The bill will promote industrial unrest, provide employers with incentives to drive down wages and thereby lower purchasing power of American pepole, which in 1946 was reduced by five billion dollars, whereas corporation profits increased by three billion dollars.

"The tax reduction bill as passed by the Senate should not be finally enacted into law. It is not a fair tax bill. The tax reduction does not benefit the modest income groups, which is fairest way of spreading benefits of tax reduction. The bill would practically bring the very wealthy back to their lower prewar basis while leaving families with modest incomes still close to higher war basis. It does nothing about lowering burden of excise taxes, the bulk of which are paid by modest income groups and increases cost of living to families least able to afford it. It would reduce taxes at a time when surplus tax revenues above Government appropriations should be used for reducing our national debt, so necessary in this period of inflation, with prices still rising and danger of depression still facing us. Both bills do little or nothing for the income groups which provide major part of our consumer purchasing power."

James Hagerty, secretary to Governor Dewey, told The Post the Governor had just returned from a week's trip out of town. He said he does not customarily comment on queries of this nature. Hagerty explained that when Governor Dewey has a statement to make, he usually makes it publicly, through the press in Albany.

Vern Scoggins, secretary to Governor Warren, told The Post Governor Warren also had just returned from a trip out of town and did not care to make any comment off-hand. Scoggins further explained: "Governor Warren isn't in the habit of making comment on national things, but is devoting himself to Western things."

rather than on actual reductions in Government costs, would leave the Treasury on shaky ground.

Taft Urges Approval

Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio), chairman of the Senate Republican Policy committee, however, insisted there would be plenty of money for both tax cuts and debt reduction in a statement calling for a presidential signature.

"The quicker we can revise our sights downward, the lower we can keep the expenditures," said Taft. "I don't believe the President can afford to veto this bill, because it would put him definitely on the side of high taxes and high expenses."

Taft estimated that "even allowing for a business recession from present volume" there would be an eight billion dollar surplus in the Treasury in the next fiscal year, without the tax cut.

He added:

"The tremendous burden of taxation today in the United States, practically 30 per cent of the national income, is a serious burden on every individual and every business. A free economy can't operate successfully with such a tremendous burden. Everything is all right as long as prices keep going up, but once inflation stops a tax burden of this kind might turn a slight recession into a serious depression."

Senate Acts Swiftly

The Ohioan contended tax policy is something for Congress to set "just as foreign policy is peculiarly the function of the President," and concluded:

"The President ought not to veto this bill unless he regards it as a dangerous threat to the welfare of the country, which it obviously is not."

The Senate swiftly passed the bill after a brief explanation of conference changes by Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.).

Only six Democrats joined 42 Republicans in voting "aye." Twenty-six Democrats voted "no," joined by two Republicans—Senators John Sherman Cooper (Ky.), and Wayne Morse (Oreg.).

As revised in conference, the bill ranges cuts from 30 per cent on lowest bracket incomes to 10.5 per cent on incomes over $302,000.

These rates would take effect on payroll witholdings, beginning July 1, in lieu of cuts, retroactive to last January 1, imposed by the House.

In effect, taxpayers would receive only half-rate reductions on their full 1947 incomes in their final computations next March 1. In 1948 and thereafter they would receive the full 10½ to 30 per cent slash.

9-Year-Old Committee On Refugees Disbanded

South Proposes Portal Pay End

the amount represented in Lewis' negotiations, agreed to meet again with mine union representatives at 10 a. m. today.

The Southern operators, for whom Henry F. Warden acted as spokesman, said they had proposed to pay $12.70 for a work day of 8 hours at the "face." Time spent by the miners walking to work would be uncompensated. They would still be allowed the present 15 minutes for lunch.

Warden said his group felt that the new portal-to-portal act wiped out the necessity of their paying for this walking time.

Their proposed rate would compare with $11.85 which the miners now receive for the same nine hours of walking and working. Lewis had asked for $13.05 for a shorter, 8-hour portal-to-portal day. That would include one hour of walking time, half an hour for lunch and six and one half hours' productive labor.

Regarding other contract issues, the operators said they opposed a welfare fund, but were willing to "explore" the need for a fund to alleviate "hardship cases." If one were established, Warden said, it would have to be jointly administered, limited to a maximum amount, and rules for its operation would have to be agreed upon in advance.

The operators "seriously object" to Federal control of all safety conditions in the mines. They proposed also curtailment of the authority which mine-safety committees now enjoy under the contract between Lewis and the Government.

Warden's statement dwelt at length on the need for a differential in wages between Northern and Southern mines, but he said that during the present negotiations the demand for a differential would be waived.

All of the operators' proposals, Warden added, were "negotiable." He said some progress had been made in the talks during the past several days and that he was still hopeful of an agreement before June 30, when the Government relinquishes possession of the mines and returns them to their private owners.

At the conclusion of yesterday's negotiations, the miners' union issued a blunt statement declaring that the operators' offer was unrealistic and would banish the concept of the basic seven-hour day for which the union is striving. But the statement, issued under the name of UMW Vice President John O'Leary, did not foreclose further talks. It read:

"The Southern coal operators refused to shorten the 54-hour week; or agree to a health and welfare fund, inclusion of the U. S. Mine Safety Code and, furthermore, seek to curtail the authority of local mine safety committees, all of which are now provisions of the existing Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement.

"The 85 cents a day wage increase allegedly offered is predicated on straight-time rates which would eliminate the basic seven-hour day."

Mine Pay Issues in Brief

The table shows the comparative weekly earnings and hourly pay of coal miners as thep presently stand under Government operation; as they would be if John L. Lewis' demands were granted; as they would be under the Northern operators' proposals, and under the Southern operators' offer:

	Present 9-hour portal-to-portal	Lewis' demand, 8-hour portal-to-portal	Northern offer, 8-hour portal-to-portal	Southern offer, 8-hour "productive" day (9-hour portal-to-portal)
5-day-week	$59.25	$65.25	$56.75	$63.50
6-day-week	$75.25	$83.67	$72.77	$82.25
Basic hourly rate	$ 1.18	$ 1.53	$ 1.33	$1.58*

*For time actually at the face; walking time not paid for.

Under the present arrangement, Lewis' demands and the Northern operators' offer, time and one half is paid for all work in excess of seven hours a day. Under the Southern operators' offer, it would begin only after eight hours. Under all offers, demands and the present arrangement, time and one half is paid for all of the sixth day of work.

The present practice, and that generall contemplated at least for another year while the world coal shortage exists, is for the mines to offer six rays' work per week. It is optional with the miner, however, to accept the sixth day.

German Food Plight Easing

Stuttgart, Germany, June 3 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Germany, told the German Council of States today that the food situation was improving and that the full ration of 1550 calories a day would be met in August, when the harvest is completed.

Rural and urban areas are receiving almost the full ration now, but residents of large cities are receiving considerably less because of inadequate transportation, Clay said.

Replying to charges the United States is failing to meet its food commitments, Clay said that May shipments of 340,000 tons of grain actually exceeded original promises by 40,000 tons.

Hemisphere Talks On Defense Near

U. S. at Last Ready For Parley at Rio, Argentina Advised

The United States is willing at last to start "consultations" on a new mutual defense pact with the other American republics.

This assurance was given by President Truman yesterday to Argentine Ambassador Oscar Ivanissevitch during a half-hour's talk at the White House.

Their conversation took place in the presence of Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Acheson, but without Assistant Secretary Spruille Braden.

Neither the White House nor the Ambassador would say whether this meeting marked the ending of the long dispute between the United States and the Peron government in Buenos Aires.

A White House statement issued after the meeting, however, clearly foreshadowed the early summoning of the long-delayed conference on hemisphere defense at Rio de Jeneiro.

The wartime Chapultepec conference at which Argentina promised to rid herself of Nazi agents, provided for a permanent defense agreement to be negotiated as quickly as possible after the war.

The Rio conference has been postponed repeatedly because of the United States' contention that Argentina had not yet lived up to its promises. The White House statement was careful not to say that Argentina had or had not complied.

Text of Statement

Here is the text of the statement:

"The Argentine Ambassador, who has just returned from Argentina, reviewed with the President and the Secretary of State the steps which his government has taken and is continuing to take in fulfilment of its commitments undertaken in the final act of the Inter-American Conference on Problems of War and Peace at Chapultepec.

"He expressed the views of his government that no obstacle remained to discussion looking toward the treaty of mutual assistance contemplated by the Act of Chapultepec.

"The President indicated his willingness to renew the consultations with the governments of the other American republics initiated by the United States memorandum of April 1, 1945, on this subject."

Presumably the Ambassador told of the recent expulsions of Nazi agents from Argentina, which Foreign Minister Bramuglia later said represented full compliance with his country's promises.

Others to Be Consulted

There has been no statement from the United States, however, to indicate whether these measures are regarded here as full compliance. Other American republics, it is assumed, will be asked for their views on this point before the Rio conference can be summoned.

As usual whenever Argentine relations have been discussed lately, there was renewed speculation yesterday about Braden's future in the State Department. He has been an uncompromising foe of the Peron government, and has insisted repeatedly on full and whole-hearted compliance by Argentina as a prerequisite to a new hemisphere defense treaty.

He is known to have disapproved of President Truman's recent message calling for the sale of arms to Latin American republics, and has never been disposed to take Peron's assurances at their face value.

The general belief yesterday was that Braden would resign this summer; that Ambassador George S. Messersmith in Buenos Aires would also resign or be transferred elsewhere, and that Secretary Marshall would enter the Rio negotiations with a clean slate of new advisers.

Marshall Asks U. S. Military Missions

Unless the United States sends military missions to foreign countries "some other nation will," Secretary of State Marshall told Congress yesterday.

Testifying before the House Armed Services Committee, Marshall said these training missions "could not in any sense be described as military units nor could they conceivably be considered as expeditionary forces."

The committee is studying legislation to authorize the President to send advisory military missions to countries which request them.

The missions, Marshall said, would be very small and would act only for training. They would not, he said, serve as sources of military intelligence. To do that, he added, would "create suspicion."

As to whether such a move would result in any ill feeling on the part of Russia, Marshall replied to a question by Representative Arends (R., Ill.):

"No more so than they have now with respect to our mission in China."

He could not specify, he said, how many missions would be sent, though several countries have asked for them. The mission to China, he said, would be continued.

In addition the United States now has a mission in Iran, which Marshall said was "doing an outstanding job."

He pointed out that it was "traditional policy" of the United States to aid nations of the Western Hemisphere to maintain their independence. Also, he said, such aid to other nations would be "in the interest of national security."

"Developments during the course of the war," Marshall said, "have emphasized the strategic importance of the Near, Middle and Far East regions, the component countries of which are in a state of intense political, social and economic readjustment. Some have just emerged from the conditions of conquered countries, others have been only recently released from the condition of semi-subject peoples under the mandate system. Many of them need educational and technical assistance to increase their stability and security."

An effort to secure committee approval of the measure without further hearings was blocked by Representative Short (R., Mo.) who objected to immediate action. It was then referred to a subcommittee for further study.

Compton Report Spurs House To Set Hearings on Training

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The House Armed Services Committee agreed yesterday to begin hearings within 10 days on universal military training, termed essential to national security by a civilian commission.

The Senate Armed Services Committee will meet today to decide what action it should take.

Long moribund as a legislative issue, universal training had new life pumped into it by the commission's unanimous report made public Monday. Further attention was focused on the issue yesterday by Dr. Karl T. Compton, head of the commission, who telegraphed Chairman Andrews (R., N. Y.) of the House committee that the present world situation was "too serious to justify delay."

Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and an atomic scientist, is slated to be the first witness before the House committee.

In his telegram, Compton said Congress should "tackle the problem promptly and courageously."

"There is no certainty," he declared, "that intrigue backed with force has been abandoned as an instrument for national aggrandizement and unhappily the present actual evidence in some quarters points otherwise.

"If anyone impressed our commission on universal training more than the wide implication of this problem, it was the positive value for peace of adopting a military training program and the great risk in not doing so.

"The international future is still obscure despite our ardent hope and effort for the success of the United Nations as an effective instrumentality to insure peace."

In spite of the abrupt reawakening of the universal training issue, there appeared little chance that any legislation could be enacted at this session of Congress. Not only is the calendar loaded, but only legislation of the most extreme urgency could be pushed through the routine of hearings, committee action and debate in the six weeks or so before the summer Congressional vacation, and not all legislators, by any means, see this issue as one of emergency.

However, if committee action could be completed between now and the recess date, the legislation would be on the calendar for consideration soon after Congress reconvenes.

Several bills embodying the machinery for universal military training have been introduced, among them one which very closely meets the recommendations of the Compton commission. Andrews said his committee would not confine its hearings to any one measure but to the subject in general.

U. N. May Get Hungary Coup

plaining that such "consultation" with Ambassadors was usual when a new government took charge.

Senator Vandenberg's speech yesterday opened a three-day debate in the Senate over ratification of the Italian and satellite treaties. A vote is expected by 2 p. m. tomorrow, and indications yesterday were that the treaties would get the necessary two-thirds majority.

The first day's debate, however, showed a number of Senators anxious to postpone ratification, in addition to the small but vehement group wanting rejection of the treaties, chiefly on anti-Soviet grounds. Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.), usually a supporter of the Administration's foreign policies, was one of those who argued for postponement.

Vandenberg himself echoed former President Herbert Hoover in his impatience over the tactics of the Soviet government.

"We cannot wait too much longer for Soviet cooperation and consent in stabilizing western and central Europe," said Vandenberg, although such agreement is "still infinitely preferable."

"The rest of us are entitled to just as much voluntary freedom of action on our side of the iron curtain as the Soviets and their satellites have assumed, often coercively.

"We cannot wait indefinitely to stabilize relationships with those who substantially think alike—and this includes the control of atomic energy. Patience is still a virtue, but not forever, particularly when time runs against us."

Some day, said Vandenberg, there would be settlements with Germany and Austria—"even if, unhappily, we are forced by circumstances to organize peace in our own zones alone."

Nevertheless, Vandenberg insisted that rejection or postponement of the Italian and satellite treaties would not serve American interests. Rejection, he warned, would be America's responsibility alone, and defects in the treaties could not be removed by unilateral American action.

"You can imagine, for example, what would happen in the potentially explosive boundary areas between Yugoslavia and Italy, the cockpits of white-hot controversy," he said, "if the United States drew one boundary line, and if Soviet Russia drew another, or if we procrastinate and jointly draw none at all.

"You can imagine what would happen if we unilaterally try to give Trieste to Italy, as was our wish, while Soviet Russia unilaterally tries to give Trieste to Yugoslavia, as was her wish, or if we leave it all in angry flux."

Delay in retifying, he warned, would be bad for Italy and for Europe, since it would perpetuate confusion and uncertainty. It would require the continued presence of American troops in Italy and give greater scope to Communist propaganda against American good faith.

Similarly, he argued, rejection or postponement of the Hungarian treaty would not help the situation in central Europe. He reminded the Senate that the Hungarian treaty provided for the withdrawal of Soviet occupation troops within ninety days. Such withdrawal, Vandenberg contended, would give the anti-Communist people of Hungary a greater chance to win back their democratic liberties.

The case against immediate ratification was stated by Fulbright, who offered a motion to postpone further consideration of the treaties until January 25, 1948. The Senate must first dispose of this motion before it can vote on the treaties themselves.

Fulbright said he proposed delay because of the "renewed expansion of the Communists, as exemplified by their action in Hungary." On the basis of what has happened in Hungary, he predicted, Senate ratification of the treaties "would create the same situation in Italy" and the Communists would seize control there.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) suggested delay in ratifying the Italian treaty until more progress has been made with Russia on a settlement with Germany.

Senators Eastland (D., Miss.) and Wherry (R., Neb.) questioned Vandenberg sharply about the reparations clauses of the Italian treaty.

"Does the Senator place any confidence in Mr. Stalin or Mr. Tito?" asked Eastland.

"So far as I am concerned," Vandenberg answered, "Mr. Stalin and Mr. Tito are unavoidable parties to the treaty," and he added that 16 other allies were signatories.

"This is the best we can do," said Vandenberg, "unless Senators want to fight it out with them."

Wherry suggested Italy would seek a loan in the United States to enable her to pay reparations to Russia. Vandenberg retorted he knew of no loans made or contemplated to pay reparations, and explained that Italian reparations would be paid in labor rather than in resources or money.

The small group opposed to ratification will line up behind the Fulbright proposal for delay. The fate of this proposal, which may come to a vote today, will indicate the size of the majority for the treaties themselves.

While the Senate was debating the Italian treaty, Italian Ambassador Alberto Tarchiani visited Undersecretary of State Will Clayton to discuss economic help for Italy. He seemed confident on leaving, especially concerning Italy's early use of the 100 million dollar Export-Import Bank credit granted last January.

Chinese Reds Gain in Assault

Nanking, June 3 (AP).—Chinese government defenders of three key Manchurian Railway cities gave ground today before fierce assaults by six Communist divisions threatening to isolate Changchun, the capital.

Chinese press dispatches said the garrison of Changtu, hard-pressed city 70 miles northeast of Mukden on the Mukden-Changchun Railway, appeared to be "fighting a losing battle."

(The Chinese Communist radio in North China asserted that Communist troops seized Changtu Monday, killing or capturing 4000 remnants of that government's seventy-first army and allied units. The broadcast was heard by the Associated Press listening post in San Francisco.)

All telegraphic communications between Mukden and Changtu were broken. Mukden dispatches declared at least 20,000 Communist troops were attacking Changtu.

The situation was described as just as desperate at famed Szephingkai, 35 miles northeast of Changtu, and at Kaiyuan, a third railway center 15 miles southeast of Changtu.

Mukden dispatches said Communist Gen. Wan Yi was using six full divisions in the attacks on the triangular area.

The army-controlled Peace Daily asserted the government was striking back with its own guerillas deep inside Communist territory and had seized Hulan, 20 miles north of Harbin, Red headquarters in Manchuria.

Reds Planning To Oust Tildy In Hungary

By Jack Guinn

Budapest, June 3 (AP).—Hungary's new Communist-dominated government was reliably reported tonight to be planning to force the resignation of Centrist President Zoldman Tildy and order the recall of Hungarian diplomats abroad.

As Leftists tightened their control over the republic, additional members of former Premier Ferenc Nagy's government were said to have fled into exile in non-Communist countries.

[The United Press reported that Minister of Justice Istvan Ries announced today that approximately 10 per cent of the country's voters would be disenfranchised in a new electoral law to be presented to a special session of the National Assembly next Tuesday.

[The "voting reform," Ries said, would raise the age minimum for voters from 20 years to 22 and would exclude all former members of Fascist parties and all immediate members of families in which individuals had been condemned for war crimes or "crimes committed against democracy."

[Ries estimated the "reform" would deprive about 500,000 persons of the right to vote. In the 1945 election there were 5,164,661 registered voters.]

Tildy Reported Worried

An informed Hungarian source said that Tildy, a Methodist minister and colleague of Nagy in the Small Holders Party, was holding office on borrowed time.

The informant said Tildy had managed to look the other way during the pro-Russian bloodless coup d'etat last week, in which Nagy resigned while at a Swiss vacation resort. He added that the time was now running out and Tildy was considerably worried about his own future.

Other Hungarian political sources reported that Aldar Szegedy-Maszak, Minister at Washington, would be among the diplomats recalled soon to "report to the government."

Others who would be brought home include Paul Auer at Paris, who was prowestern before he left Hungary, and Ferenc Gordon, Minister at Bern, and a close friend of Nagy, the informants said.

An Allied diplomatic source confirmed that Bela Varga, a Catholic priest who was speaker of the house, had fled across the Russian zone of Austria and was now "in a safe place." Varga said Saturday he had learned that Communist leader planned to arrest him on charges of plotting against the government.

Another Priest Resigns

Another priest, the Rev. Istvan Balogh, secretary-general of the Small Holders Party, announced his resignation because of "ill health," the Smallholder newspaper Magyar Nemzet reported. The newspaper said that during the last few days, when Communist pressure became heaviest, Father Balogh had become "sicker and sicker."

The new premier, Lajos Dinnyes, Leftwing Small Holder, reportedly planned to appoint Erno Mihalyfi to replace Laszlo Jekely, Tildy's personal cabinet representative, who is minister of information and acting foreign minister.

Two Communists will head Dinnyes' press department, an announcement said.

Unconfirmed rumors were circulated that Minister of the Interior Laszlo Rajik, a Communist, planned to expel the foreign press as soon as the Hungarian peace treaty was ratified.

Text of Vandenberg Speech on Hungary

This is what Senator Vandenberg said, in part, about Hungary in his speech in the Senate yesterday:

THE treaty with Hungary has now virtually become in the last 10 days a treaty with another Soviet satellite. It potentially classifies itself now with the Bulgarian and Romanian treaties, which are with Soviet satellites.

As in the cases of Bulgaria and Romania, so also in the case of Hungary, it is necessary to have a treaty with this former enemy country, in order to end the state of war, regardless of what their internal status may be . . .

But recent developments in Hungary certainly add nothing but a further sense of outrage to the sensibilities of those Allied nations which, like America, will and must insist that peace with justice is the goal which we shall continue to pursue.

NOWHERE has the violation of the basic freedoms for which we were presumed to have been fighting World War II raised more definite implications of Moscow's influence in these unholy events or required more definite official inquiry to fix the facts. Otherwise, Yalta and Potsdam, to say nothing of the Atlantic Charter and the pledges of the U. N. are contemptuously flouted and their "scraps of paper" become relics of dishonor.

Ever since the Hungarian people voted by a large majority in favor of the so-called Smallholders Party and set up a coalition government, the Communist Party, mustering but 17 per cent of the popular vote, has been busy undermining the coalition government of which they were a nominal but treacherous part. Under what seems to have been the conspiring protection of occupying arms, this minority infiltrated the government and captured the police . . .

The familiar pattern of infiltration and internal sabotage once more appears to have "done its stuff." If the pattern runs true to form, Hungary will soon enjoy the further travesty of a rigged election to confirm these triumphs of Communist "democracy."

America cannot deal with Hungary as it deals with Greece. Hungary is a former enemy state. Greece is an ever-constant ally. Hungary is under armed occupation by Soviet troops pursuant to her rights under the terms of armistice. Greece is an independent state. Hungary cannot therefore ask or receive our aid in the Greek manner.

THEY are parallel cases but they cannot have parallel treatment. Yet this need not mute our voice. We need not be impotent. On the contrary, it should move us swiftly to demand the total facts. We cannot condone, by any sort of silence, what appears to be the treacherous conquest of a brave, exploited people whose independent autonomy appears to have been treacherously destroyed within a few short months by those same minorities which were overwhelmingly repudiated at the Hungarian polls.

This may become—if the facts justify these presumptions—a clear call to trial in the forum of the United Nations; and I repeat, if the facts justify these presumptions, it will become America's duty to sound that call.

This is no reason to reject the Hungarian or Italian treaty. It would demand rejection if that would help free Hungary, but it seems to me that all the facts argue to the contrary.

Ninety days after ratification of the treaty all foreign troops—which means all Soviet troops—must be withdrawn from Hungary except those necessary to protect so-called "lines of communication" between Russia and Austria. The exception is an unhappy one because the Soviets will measure this necessity to suit themselves.

On the other hand there is bound to be some degree of withdrawal, and it has been independently estimated at a minimum of 50 per cent. Whatever withdrawal occurs will represent vital relief for Hungary; will proportionately weaken military dictatorship; and proportionately relieve Hungarian autonomy. Here again we must assess the alternatives . . .

7 Presidential Possibilities In Favor of Tax, Labor Bills

should become law but wanted the labor bill rejected. Senator Byrd favored the labor bill but opposed tax reduction at this time. Senator Pepper said neither the tax cut nor labor bill should become law.

Here are the replies:

SENATOR VANDENBERG — "Answering your wire I most emphatically think the labor bill as reported by the conference committee and the tax bill as agreed upon in conference should become the law of the land. I think they represent effective and rational progress toward two essential objectives in the life of the Nation."

SENATOR TAFT—"I think the President should sign both bills."

SENATOR SALTONSTALL—"I certainly hope the President will sign both the tax reduction and labor management bills. In recent months I have always favored some form of tax reduction this year because it should give our economy a much needed shot in the arm.

"On the labor bill, I voted for such amendments as I thought would be helpful in our labor-management relations. It seems to me the bill as it came out of conference should be a fair and beneficial law to both sides."

FORMER GOV. STASSEN—"In direct answer to your specific questions it is my view that considered as a whole the conference report on a new national labor policy is a good bill, a moderate bill and should be enacted into law.

"It is clearly better than no law at all.

"It is definitely better than either the original Hartley bill or the original Taft-Ball bill.

"If administered with fairness, it will not injure sound, strong labor unions, will promote industrial peace, and will advance the general welfare of the workers and the people of America as a whole.

"My detailed position on labor legislation, based on our successful experience in Minnesota and a study of labor relations here and abroad for a number of years was presented in my testimony before the Senate Labor Committee on February 7. That testimony still represents my view. But I recognize that in a free country under a representative government no one can obtain exactly the kind of legislation he would individually prefer.

"It is encouraging that of the seven measures which I then urged should be avoided, none is in the final conference bill.

"These undesirable measures were, compulsory arbitration of disputes over future working conditions, compulsory labor courts with power of final decision of future working conditions, taking away the ultimate right to strike from any workers for private capital, banning maintenance of membership contracts, prohibiting industry-wide bargaining, permitting injunctions by private petition notwithstanding the Norris-LaGuardia Act, granting authority to draft strikers into the armed services.

"These seven bad proposals have all been defeated and left out of the bill.

"Of the 10 positive proposals which I made in my testimony, nine are included in substantial measures in the final bill, including provisions against jurisdictional strikes and secondary boycotts, for financial reports and secret ballots of workers, no union of foremen, free speech for employes and improved mediation service under a separate division, with time to mediate before a strike.

"As to your second question on the tax measure it is and has been my announced view that a sound financial policy for America requires that the margin between estimated receipts at current tax rates and budgeted spending, one-half should be used for tax reduction on personal incomes and small business, and one-half should be used for payment on the debt.

"The present tax reduction measure goes beyond that point and is undesirable. The sensible solution of the deadlock between Congress and the President is for the President to confer with leaders of both parties in Congress, and to indicate the amount of the tax cut he will accept in terms of a horizontal adjustment of the present bill, and the prompt enactment of a new measure to carry out this compromise. If he does not wish to do this he should sign the bill, as the greatest inflationary dangers are past and a tax reduction slightly larger than desirable is better than no tax reduction at all. If the President vetoes the bill, it should be passed over his veto."

SENATOR BALDWIN—"I hope the President will sign both bills. I think they are fair and just. The tax bill grants reductions where a majority of the Senate thought they were needed most and where they would be most helpful in stimulating business and employment. The labor bill does not satisfy the extremes in either management or labor. I can understand how the leaders of labor would prefer that there be no legislation. On the other hand, this bill is designed to clear up the difficulties we have had in the past and to protect the general public by maintaining production and making it possible to more easily settle labor disputes."

SENATOR BRICKER — "The President should sign both the tax reduction bill and the labor bill for the good of the country. He should be very hesitant to substitute his own judgment for the judgment of Congress and the will of the people."

FORMER GOV. ARNALL—"The tax reduction bill should become law. Lower taxes assist in averting recession. Greater incentive for initiative is needed in the United States today.

"The labor bill should be rejected. Purpose of the measure is to break the back of organized labor. Organized labor has done much for the working man. Its gains should be protected. The labor bill does not offer a magic formula in the settlement of industrial controversies. In my judgment it will intensify them."

SENATOR BYRD—"I am in favor of the labor bill as agreed to in conference and am opposed to the tax reduction bill for reasons expressed in the Senate."

SENATOR PEPPER—"The labor bill reported by conference committee should not be finally enacted into law. It does not and cannot prevent strikes. It provides no solution to questions of settling wages, hours and working conditions in dispute between employers and labor organizations, which represented about 85 per cent of total time lost because of strikes in 1946. The bill will promote industrial unrest, provide employers with incentives to drive down wages and thereby lower purchasing power of American pepole, which in 1946 was reduced by five billion dollars, whereas corporation profits increased by three billion dollars.

"The tax reduction bill as passed by the Senate should not be finally enacted into law. It is not a fair tax bill. The tax reduction does not benefit the modest income groups, which is fairest way of spreading benefits of tax reduction. The bill would practically bring the very wealthy back to their lower prewar basis while leaving families with modest incomes still close to higher war basis. It does nothing about lowering burden of excise taxes, the bulk of which are paid by modest income groups and increases cost of living to families least able to afford it. It would reduce taxes at a time when surplus tax revenues above Government appropriations should be used for reducing our national debt, so necessary in this period of inflation, with prices still rising and danger of depression still facing us. Both bills do little or nothing for the income groups which provide major part of our consumer purchasing power."

James Hagerty, secretary to Governor Dewey, told The Post the Governor had just returned from a week's trip out of town. He said he does not customarily comment on queries of this nature. Hagerty explained that when Governor Dewey has a statement to make, he usually makes it publicly, through the press in Albany.

Vern Scoggins, secretary to Governor Warren, told The Post Governor Warren also had just returned from a trip out of town and did not care to make any comment off-hand. Scoggins further explained: "Governor Warren isn't in the habit of making comment on national things, but is devoting himself to Western things."

Senate Passes Tax Cut Bill

Taft Urges Approval

Senator Robert A. Taft (Ohio), chairman of the Senate Republican Policy committee, however, insisted there would be plenty of money for both tax cuts and debt reduction in a statement calling for a presidential signature.

"The quicker we can revise our sights downward, the lower we can keep the expenditures," said Taft. "I don't believe the President can afford to veto this bill, because it would put him definitely on the side of high taxes and high expenses."

Taft estimated that "even allowing for a business recession from present volume" there would be an eight billion dollar surplus in the Treasury in the next fiscal year, without the tax cut.

He added:

"The tremendous burden of taxation today in the United States, practically 30 per cent of the national income, is a serious burden on every individual and every business. A free economy can't operate successfully with such a tremendous burden. Everything is all right as long as prices keep going up, but once inflation stops a tax burden of this kind might turn a slight recession into a serious depression."

Senate Acts Swiftly

The Ohioan contended tax policy is something for Congress to set "just as foreign policy is peculiarly the function of the President," and concluded:

"The President ought not to veto this bill unless he regards it as a dangerous threat to the welfare of the country, which it obviously is not."

The Senate swiftly passed the bill after a brief explanation of conference changes by Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.).

Only six Democrats joined 42 Republicans in voting "aye." Twenty-six Democrats voted "no," joined by two Republicans—Senators John Sherman Cooper (Ky.), and Wayne Morse (Oreg.).

As revised in conference, the bill ranges cuts from 30 per cent on lowest bracket incomes to 10.5 per cent on incomes over $302,000.

These rates would take effect on payroll witholdings, beginning July 1, in lieu of cuts, retroactive to last January 1, imposed by the House.

In effect, taxpayers would receive only half-rate reductions on their full 1947 incomes in their final computations next March 1. In 1948 and thereafter they would receive the full 10½ to 30 per cent slash.

9-Year-Old Committee On Refugees Disbanded

London, June 3 (U.P.).—The Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees (ICR), founded almost nine years ago at the suggestion of the late Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was disbanded today by unanimous decision of the 35 governments which composed it.

ICR functions and assets will be transferred to the United Nations International Refugee Organization (IRO) July 1.

South Proposes Portal Pay End

the amount represented in Lewis' negotiations, agreed to meet again with mine union representatives at 10 a. m. today.

The Southern operators, for whom Henry F. Warden acted as spokesman, said they had proposed to pay $12.70 for a work day of 8 hours at the "face." Time spent by the miners walking to work would be uncompensated. They would still be allowed the present 15 minutes for lunch.

Warden said his group felt that the new portal-to-portal act wiped out the necessity of their paying for this walking time.

Their proposed rate would compare with $11.85 which the miners now receive for the same nine hours of walking and working. Lewis had asked for $13.05 for a shorter, 8-hour portal-to-portal day. That would include one hour of walking time, half an hour for lunch and six and one half hours' productive labor.

Regarding other contract issues, the operators said they opposed a welfare fund, but were willing to "explore" the need for a fund to alleviate "hardship cases." If one were established, Warden said, it would have to be jointly administered, limited to a maximum amount, and rules for its operation would have to be agreed upon in advance.

The operators "seriously object" to Federal control of all safety conditions in the mines. They proposed also curtailment of the authority which mine-safety committees now enjoy under the contract between Lewis and the Government.

Warden's statement dwelt at length on the need for a differential in wages between Northern and Southern mines, but he said that during the present negotiations the demand for a differential would be waived.

All of the operators' proposals, Warden added, were "negotiable." He said some progress had been made in the talks during the past several days and that he was still hopeful of an agreement before June 30, when the Government relinquishes possession of the mines and returns them to their private owners.

At the conclusion of yesterday's negotiations, the miners' union issued a blunt statement declaring that the operators' offer was unrealistic and would banish the concept of the basic seven-hour day for which the union is striving. But the statement, issued under the name of UMW Vice President John O'Leary, did not foreclose further talks. It read:

"The Southern coal operators refused to shorten the 54-hour week; or agree to a health and welfare fund, inclusion of the U. S. Mine Safety Code and, furthermore, seek to curtail the authority of local mine safety committees, all of which are now provisions of the existing Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement.

"The 85 cents a day wage increase allegedly offered is predicated on straight-time rates which would eliminate the basic seven-hour day."

Mine Pay Issues in Brief

The table shows the comparative weekly earnings and hourly pay of coal miners as thep presently stand under Government operation; as they would be if John L. Lewis' demands were granted; as they would be under the Northern operators' proposals, and under the Southern operators' offer:

	Present 8-hour portal-to-portal	Lewis' demand, 8-hour portal-to-portal	Northern offer, 8-hour portal-to-portal	Southern offer, 8-hour "productive" day (8-hour portal-to-portal)
5-day-week	$59.25	$65.25	$56.75	$63.50
6-day-week	$75.25	$83.67	$72.77	$82.25
Basic hourly rate	$ 1.18	$ 1.53	$ 1.33	$1.58*

*For time actually at the face; walking time not paid for.

Under the present arrangement, Lewis' demands and the Northern operators' offer, time and one half is paid for all work in excess of seven hours a day. Under the Southern operators' offer, it would begin only after eight hours. Under all offers, demands and the present arrangement, time and one half is paid for all of the sixth day of work.

The present practice, and that generall contemplated at least for another year while the world coal shortage exists, is for the mines to offer six rays' work per week. It is optional with the miner, however, to accept the sixth day.

German Food Plight Easing

Stuttgart, Germany, June 3 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Germany, told the German Council of States today that the food situation was improving and that the full ration of 1550 calories a day would be met in August, when the harvest is completed.

Rural and urban areas are receiving almost the full ration now, but residents of large cities are receiving considerably less because of inadequate transportation, Clay said.

Replying to charges the United States is failing to meet its food commitments, Clay said that May shipments of 340,000 tons of grain actually exceeded original promises by 40,000 tons.

Ramadier Tells Communists They Incited French Strikes

Paris, June 3 (AP).—Premier Paul Ramadier charged the Communists today with fomenting France's current wave of strikes in the hope of precipitating a cabinet crisis.

He named no names, but he made his meaning clear during a National Assembly debate when he turned directly to the Communist benches to assert that:

1. The strikes were taking place as if directed "by an invisible orchestra chief."

2. "I am obliged to admit that there is a sort of assault against democratic authority. It is as if one wanted to substitute another authority."

3. There are efforts "to create a feverish atmosphere," and "to open a cabinet crisis now would be to imperil the regime."

Ramadier made his assertions during a plea to the Legislature to reject a request by Communist Party Deputy Etienne Fajon for a debate on the government's recent action in ordering the requisitioning of power plants, which were then threatened by strike.

Ramadier won what amounted to a vote of confidence when the Assembly—by raised hand balloting—overwhelmingly accepted his plea, and refused to argue the Communist motion.

Assembly cloakrooms buzzed with talk of Ramadier's courage in making his hard hitting speech at the Communists, who dominate the huge C. G. T. labor union federation, which has backed most of the current strikes.

Ramadier said that the right to strike was guaranteed every Frenchman by the constitution, but that his requisition action—never actually put into effect because the strike was averted—was justified because no group of workers could be allowed "to paralyze the whole life of the nation."

Turning to the Communist benches, he added: "If you were in power you would not have hesitated a minute to do the same things."

Baruch, Forrestal, Patterson Among Notables Awarded Honorary Degrees by Columbia

New York, June 3 (AP).—Columbia University at its 193d commencement exercises today awarded honorary degrees to Bernard M. Baruch, Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal, Robert McLean, publisher of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin and president of the Associated Press; Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State and Secretary of War, and others.

Stimson

Doctor of laws degrees were given to Baruch, Forrestal, Patterson, Stimson, William J. Donovan, wartime head of the Office of Strategic Services, and New York State Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Shientag.

Awarded degrees of doctor of letters were McLean and Charles Spurgeon Johnson, president-elect of Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

Doctor of science degrees were given to Vannevar Bush, president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington; Louis S. Cates, mining engineer and president of Phelps-Dodge Corp., and Harvey Seeley Mudd, mining engineer.

John William Charles Wand, Lord Bishop of London, was awarded the degree of doctor of sacred theology.

Accomplishments Cited

Patterson was cited as a distinguished soldier and a "judge in the great tradition;" Forrestal as a "fine public servant, unassuming and responsible;" Stimson as "an internationalist of principle and conviction, who saw in 1931 the dark shadow of the second World War."

Baruch was cited as an "elder statesman, whose matchless ability to fathom a problem and grasp from it the salient facts for its solution has been invaluable to the Nation."

The citation for Bush said he "guided America's men of science in creating a fortification of new discoveries, an arsenal of knowledge" as head of the Office of Scientific Research and Development in World War II.

Patterson, addressing Columbia alumni, paid tribute today to professional soldiers or sailors who are named to high office on their own merits, differing with "the imagination of some critics" that the military mind "is a mind hostile to freedom."

MacArthur an Example

The Secretary said sometimes the specification is given that "the military mind is the closed mind, the mind that will not adjust to changed conditions."

Patterson asserted: "That charge will not carry conviction to anyone who has lived with the military while they were developing, and on sudden notice too, the plans for mobilizing, organizing and equipping a force running into the millions."

Praising the way Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Japan and Gen. Lucius Clay in Germany are handling civilian problems "with extraordinary ability," he declared, "There surely is no trace of a closed mind in their performance, no sign of inability to understand the needs of the situation."

Dr. Bush, told an alumni luncheon that the idea that science is leading the world to destruction is a strange miasma—a contagious, contaminating influence.

There are, he said, many signs that the whole world sees man's search for knowledge in a wholly new light since the war.

"We may," he said, "be going too far and too fast in some ways—we usually do in this country whenever we do anything. Certainly some of the wild predictions of push-button war, tall stories of 5000-mile rockets and similar unbridled fancies, suggest a tendency to go too fast. But the core is sound, and we have at last awakened in this country to the value of our security and of adequate emphasis on science, in all its stages."

Rees Measure Affects 42,000

or any other agency under the Constitution. The President's plan proposes that the agency head be given the authority to fire after he's given a recommendation by the Civil Service loyalty board.

However, Chairman Rees and other committee members frequently criticized the President's plan as "too involved." The plan would give the employe four appeals, and five if he were a veteran. For example, Representative Vursell (R., Ill.) said the President's plan gave an accused employe "too much protection which would result in one delay after another." He said one appeal was enough.

PAY RAISES for members of the Cabinet, subcabinet, and commission and agency heads were proposed to the Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday by Senator Flanders (R., Va.).

The Senator, a successful industrialist, proposed that Cabinet members be paid $25,000; Undersecretaries and the Solicitor General $20,000 each, Assistant Secretaries $17,500, and members of boards and commissions from $17,500 to $20,000.

However, the legislator proposed six different bills, each with different salary rates. He did this, he explained, to try to get an idea from the committee on the bill it would favor. Chairman Langer asked him to report back on June 17 with detailed information on each of his proposals.

Pay raises for this top bracket have been too long delayed. It's probably the only group in or out of Government whose salaries haven't been raised since before the war. State Undersecretary Dean Acheson is the most recent able and experienced person to resign from this group because he could no longer afford to work for Uncle Sam.

Flanders estimated it would cost little more than a million dollars annually to raise salaries of the 135 officials involved under his plan.

NOTES: Charles Oliphant has been nominated for general counsel of Internal Revenue. He will succeed John P. Wenchel . . . A 20 per cent layoff is underway in Agriculture's office of the solicitor . . . The Senate Civil Service Committee yesterday voted, 7 to 3, along party lines to investigate the appointment of postmasters . . . At Commerce, an election will be held today to name an employe member of its board of efficiency rating appeals. Candidates are: Curtis Anderson, Mitchel Bushery, Harry E. Pontius, J. Harold Stehman, Mildred Steinmetz and Paul Zeis.

EMPLOYMENT: A joint study by Civil Service and Budget Bureau estimates there will be 1,800,000 fulltime Federal employes in this country on July 1. In other words, a layoff of around 150,000 is estimated for this month.

Husband Carried From Scene of Shooting . . .

AFTER LAST BULLET WAS FIRED—Henry Wright, former Treasury guard, a bullet hole in his right cheek, is carried from his residence, 913 Perry pl. ne. Police said an initial investigation showed that Wright shot and killed his wife, wounded his mother-in-law and then turned the gun on himself. He was taken to Casualty Hospital of the brain. The lead slug was believed lodged in the brain just above the left eye.

Patrolman Lee said the shooting followed a domestic quarrel which began shortly after Mrs. Wright returned home from work. Police said she worked in the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Homicide squad detectives who talked with two children of the Wrights said divorce proceedings were pending between their father and the dead woman, his third wife.

The children were identified as Mrs. Mary Zimmerman, 27, of 4000 A st. ne., and Fred Thompson Wright, 26, of 2405 Arundel rd., Mount Rainier, Md. A third child, Mrs. Dorothy Caruso, 24, of the Perry pl. address, was not a home during the shootings.

Detectives said the mother-in-law told them between screams of pain that Wright came downstairs while the two women were preparing dinner, uttered a foul name and then said:

"I'm going to kill you."

He then began firing, detectives said Mrs. Fitzgerald told them.

Although the Wrights lived together, the children told detectives, the wife was attempting to serve eviction notice on her husband.

A card found in Wright's pocket, police said, indicated he may have sought the services of a private detective in his domestic troubles.

Wright's pistol, a 22-caliber target revolver fitted to a .32-caliber pistol grip, was found at his feet, police said. In it were four exploded and one live .22-caliber "longs." On a nearby mantle in the living room were found seven more live cartridges for the gun and two empty shells, apparently unconnected with yesterday's shootings.

James Juliano, 903 Perry pl. ne., said he heard what sounded like "firecrackerss" and went out on his back porch to investigate.

Mrs. Wright, he said, was lying on her back on the stoop, bleeding profusely. Her mother, he said, was sitting on the stoop, screaming that she had been shot.

Wright was later transferred from Casualty Hospital to Gallinger Hospital, under police guard. Detective Karle Howe, special agent of the police homicide squad, hurried there but was unable to question him because of his condition.

Plane Crash Hearing Set For June 11

By the United Press

Chairman James M. Landis of the Civil Aeronautics Board announced yesterday that public hearings will be held in New York June 11 into the first of two tragic airline crashes last week that cost 95 lives.

He said the hearing will determine the cause of the crash of a United Airlines DC-4 that cracked up, with a death toll thus far of 42, while attempting to take off during a rainstorm Thursday night from LaGuardia Field.

Date for hearings into the second crash—that of an Eastern Airlines DC-4 which plummeted 53 persons to death in a swampland near Bainbridge, Md., the following night—is expected to be set tomorrow.

Landis said he would take a personal part in the New York hearings and that all interested parties will be heard.

U. S. Officials To Testify

These include W. A. Patterson, president of United, officials of the Pratt & Whitney Engine Co., the Hamilton Standard Propeller Co., and David L. Behncke, president of the Air Line Pilots Association (AFL).

Investigators and officials of the CAB and Civil Aeronautics authority also will testify.

Also present will be six congressional "watchdogs" who were assigned to the hearing to keep Congress informed. Their reports will determine whether a separate congressional investigation should be held.

Five of them are members of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, the sixth is Carl Dolan of New York, who was retained as a special counsel by a Senate Commerce Subcommittee after it was given a preliminary review of CAB findings by Landis.

CAB Witnesses Listed

Key officials of the Civil Aeronautics Board, under the direction of Col. Wallace S. Dawson, who will take part in the hearing, include the following from the Washington office:

William K. Andrews, assistant chief of the accident investigation division; Col. Robert Garrett, senior air carrier accident investigator; Kenneth C. Sonner, power plant specialist, and George French, meteorologist.

George Gay, chief of CAB regional office in New York; Joseph Fluet, senior investigator, and Will Sievert, investigator, from the New York office, will also participate in the hearing.

Landis told the subcommittee there is no evidence thus far of any safety violations in either disaster, and information now available indicates that:

1. The LaGuardia crash was due to an unexpected shift in winds as the big ship roared down the north-south runway, shortest on the field, in a takeoff for Cleveland. He said it could not be said yet whether the pilot had used "bad judgment" in using the short runway and trying to stop his plane when the wind shifted.

2. "In all probability" the Bainbridge crash resulted from a structural defect in the plane's tail assembly. Investigators are said to believe the left horizontal stabilizer "rolled back," throwing the plane into a partial outside loop that caused the pilot to lose control.

Early reports put Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman and the Air Transport Association at odds over the comparative safety of trains and planes, but an ATA spokesman said it had "all been a mistake."

Air Travel More Dangerous

Harriman told a Senate committee yesterday that air travel still is "eight times as dangerous as railroad or bus travel." The ATA later produced figures, reportedly obtained from the Government, showing there were 2.4 fatalities for every 100 million passenger miles on railroads compared with 2.5 fatalities on commercial airlines in 1945.

The spokesman, who had said yesterday that Harriman simply "stated a fact that has been known for years," said the association's figures were in error and their publication was "unfortunate."

He said the 2.4 fatality figure given for the railroads included deaths in grade crossing accidents and other "nonpassenger" fatalities.

He said the "correct figures" were those supplied by Harriman's office and the Association of American Railroads — 0.16 passenger fatalities for every 100 million passenger miles on railroads compared with the airlines' 2.5.

Dairy food ideas for warm weather meals

For cool, refreshing summer meals, praise be to dairy foods. They make whole-meal salads, frothy desserts and even answer the annual vacation chant, "What'll we do now, Mom?"

ICE CREAM MILK SHAKE—Combine 3 cups cold milk, 1 pint vanilla ice cream and 2 teaspoons vanilla in a large bowl; beat with rotary beater until frothy. Pour into glasses. Makes 4 tall, cool drinks.

VARIATIONS: Banana Milk Shake—Peel, slice, and mash 3 bananas; stir into milk mixture before pouring into glasses. Top with sliced bananas. Frosted Strawberry Cooler—Mash 2 cups strawberries with ½ cup sugar; chill half an hour. Stir into milk mixture and garnish with whole strawberries.

MINTED CHOCOLATE MILK SHAKE—Combine 2 cups cold milk, 1 pint chocolate ice cream and 2 teaspoons vanilla; beat with rotary beater until frothy. Beat ½ cup mint jelly until foamy and fold into 1 cup whipped cream (½ cup before it's whipped.) Fill glasses ⅔ full with milk mixture and top with blob of whipped cream. Makes 6 milk shakes.

COTTAGE CHEESE ASPIC—Combine 1 can condensed tomato soup with chopped medium-size onion and stalk of celery. Add enough water to make 2 cups tomato soup. Season to taste with salt, pepper and vinegar or lemon juice. Simmer, covered, 30 minutes. Strain. Soften 1 tablespoon gelatin in ¼ cup cold water and dissolve in hot soup mixture. Pour half of aspic mixture into 1½ quart ring mold. Set in refrigerator to chill until thick and syrupy. Fold 2 cups cottage cheese into remaining aspic mixture and pour into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on bed of lettuce and fill center with potato, macaroni or shrimp salad. Serves 6.

PINEAPPLE FLUFF—Whip ½ cup heavy cream, gradually adding 2 tablespoons powdered sugar. Fold in ½ cup pineapple cubes, ½ teaspoon vanilla and 1 cup sliced bananas. (Or vary with almost any drained fresh or cooked fruit.) Serve in chilled sherbert glasses. Serves 4.

New District Taxes Outlined

dollar spending program. The teachers' pay increase bill now in Congress would boost the total by $2,400,000. Cain and Bates emphasized they counted into their revenue program the cost of the teachers' pay increase.

Cain said the program will balance Washington's budget for the next two fiscal years, ending June 30, 1949, and will maintain essential city services during that time.

He said the proposed increased Federal payment would be a simple addition to the present lump sum grant, and would not call for a permanent fiscal formula to regulate future Federal payments on a percentage system.

"We simply have not been able to agree on a formula," said Cain. "But we believe we can justify our request for a four million dollar increase in the present payment."

Original Proposals Reduced

In announcing the program, he praised the work of Representative Bates and Committee Consultant Parker L. Jackson in drafting the tax proposals.

Cain pointed out that the list of new taxes was a sharp reduction from the list of nine presented by the Commissioners.

The Commissioners' list did not call for a boost in the property tax rate. The city, however, increased assessments for next year—a 20 per cent flat boost for home owners.

Taxes which the Commissioners requested, and the Cain-Bates group left out of its program, included a 2 per cent general sales tax, a 10 per cent amusement tax, a doubling of liquor taxes, a 1-cent tax on each pack of cigarettes, a 2 per cent tax on gas, light and telephone bills.

Water Payments Proposed

The Commissioners wanted the income tax extension to catch those who now escape, the increase in the Federal payment, and the boost in the gasoline tax. They also proposed making the Federal Government pay for its water, and asked authority to borrow Federal money to finance a proposed 50-million-dollar expansion in the city water system.

The income tax plan, first proposed by Bates, would make all persons who actually live in the District seven months or more in any one year file an income tax return here. The District, however, would deduct from the individual's tax here the amount of income taxes paid to a State.

Bates said the committee's plan for the water program would put expansion on a pay-as-you-go financing basis. He estimated the propsed borrowing program would have cost taxpayers 10 million dollars in interest charges. He said present water revenue is about $600,000 more than operating expenses. He explained the plan calls for using that excess, along with the $800,000 from increased rates, and the million-dollar Federal payment, to finance the water construction program.

Three Million Surplus

Bates said the fund now has a 3-million-dollar surplus. Construction is expected to average about 3 million dollars a year for the first eight or nine years. With the new program, he declared, the present surplus would be used gradually over the years of the construction program.

Bates said without the 1 cent increase in the tax on each gallon of gasoline, the city would have to stop a part of its street and bridge-building program. He cited these major projects—the South Capitol st. bridge, new highway bridges, and the K st. development. "Without a gasoline tax increase, some of these projects would have to be stopped," Bates stated.

He said the gasoline tax increase would permit a $9,210,000 highway budget for next year, of which $5,355,000 would be for building. Altogether, he estimated, the revenue plan would permit about 21 million dollars in city building next year.

Greek Guerillas Wanted Florina For 'Capital City'

Athens, June 3 (AP).—Brig. Stylianos Manidakis, a member of the Greek army's general staff, said today Greek guerillas intended to establish the capital of an independent state and appeal to Premier Tito of Yugoslavia for aid if they had been successful in capturing the city of Florina last week.

A large force of guerillas tried in two successive night attacks May 28 and 29 to capture the city of 15,000 in the Monastir Gap only 12 miles from the Yugoslav border, but were defeated both times.

Manidakis said the week ended May 31 was the most successful to date in the Greek government's general offensive against the insurgents which began April 5.

During the week, he said, 506 guerillas were killed and 1009 wounded.

'K' Company Marches to Victory . . .

WINNING FORM—Western High School's Company K leaves the field at Griffith Stadium yesterday after winning first place in sixtieth annual High School Cadet Corps company competitive drill

Western High School scored a grand slam in the annual competitive drill of Washington high school cadets at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

Western also won the three top honors in 1942. Central High School won all three places in 1918, the only other school to win all three in the 63-year history of the competition.

Western's Company K, led by Cadet Capt. George Baruday, marched to victory as the No. 1 company. Companies H and G, commanded by Capts. Lawrence Gallan and William Gingras, respectively, placed second and third.

In the band competition, first place went to Anacostia High School. Bands from McKinley and Roosevelt placed second and third.

Captain Baruday, 19-year-old winning commander, of 1515 Wisconsin ave. nw., was the day's hero. He was awarded the Allison Sailor Medal, donated in 1895 "to stimulate a higher degree of proficiency and skill in military knowledge."

The diamond-studded gold medal was presented by Frank C. Daniels, principal of McKinley High, who was colonel of Washington cadets 50 years ago.

Baruday will also have the privilege of wearing Col. Wallace M. Craigie's saber until the end of the school year. The saber, willed to the corps by Colonel Craigie, professor of military science and tactics for 23 years, was presented to Baruday by Colonel Craigie's widow.

All told, 21 companies from 10 high schools participated in the two-day competitive drill. Eleven companies drilled Monday and ten companies yesterday.

Company K's First Lieut. Robert Meese received the Interhigh Council Gold Medal from Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools. Dr. Corning presented the Interhigh Council Silver Medal to Second Lieut. Ronald Willis. The company also received a silk flag and ribbons.

The American Legion Department Gold Medal was awarded to Capt. Lawrence Gallen of Company H and the Legion's Silver Medal to Capt. William Gingras of Company G by Joseph A. Walker of the District Department, American Legion.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, awarded purple ribbons to members of the second-place company and white ribbons to members of the third-place company.

Earlier in the day medals were presented to the three winners in the distinguished noncommissioned officers competition. First, second and third place winners were, respectively, Sergt. Joseph W. Burrell of Central High School, Sergt. Verne W. Woznack of Anacostia, and Sergt. Richard Raymond of Woodrow Wilson.

Company judges were Lieut. Col. Norman A. Campbell, Maj. Robert C. Dalrymple, and Capt. William M. Calnan, all of Fort Myer, Va.

Byrnes to Advise Hollywood Upon Probe 'Attitude'

Former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes said yesterday he will advise the Hollywood movie industry on its "attitude" toward a congressional committee investigating the West Coast film colony, but said he will not appear before the committee himself.

Byrnes said he has accepted employment as counsel for the Association of Motion Picture Producers, headed by Eric Johnston, but declared:

"Under the terms of my employment, I will not appear before legislative committees."

Johnston, in announcing Byrnes' appointment in Hollywood Monday night, said one of his major assignments would be to protect the "freedom of the American screen" in connection with an investigation by the House Un-American Affairs Committee into alleged radical movements in Hollywood.

Byrnes is now practicing law in Washington.

Hindu-Moslem Division Looms As India Acquires Self-Rule

ment for transfer of the power this year either to one or to two governments—which ever solution is adopted by the Indians themselves. Government sources said the legislation would be rushed through before the parliamentary recess in August.

Until the final withdrawal of the British, now scheduled to take place by June, 1948, India will be made up of one or two self-governing countires which will be members of the British commonwealth of nations, with a status like that of Canada. This will be granted, Attlee said, "without prejudice to the right of the Indian constituent assemblies to decide in course whether or not the part of India in respect of which they have authority will remain within the British commonwealth."

The likelihood of partition meant creation of two huge nations in the vast subcontinent—Hindustan, with a population of some 198 million and Pakistan, the Moslem state, with about 57 million. In addition, the princely states have a population of about 90 million and there have been proposals for another union—Rajistan—embracing them.

During the period of dominion status, a British governor general probably Viscount Mountbatten, the Viceroy, will be the head of the country.

Attlee told Commons that if, as expected, partition is decided on, a boundary commission would be set up by the governor general in consultation with leaders of the political and religious group, to split the partitioned provinces into Moslem and non-Moslem areas.

Churchill remarked that "the theme of the unity of India" could be preserved despite partition should both states elect to remain within the British commonwealth.

Advices from New Delhi quoted some political leaders as predicting that when tempers cooled in India, both Hundustan and Parkistan may ask to remain in the commonwealth. But leaders of the opposing factions have indicated that they were quite ready to have Britain quit the country completely on schedule.

Lord Listowel, Secretary of State for India, said the main objectives of this plan were to speed transfer of power well in advance of the June, 1948, deadline; to accomplish a peaceful transition saving India from devastation and suffering which have marked the past; to obtain the widest possible measure of representation of the Indian people themselves in deciding their future, and to establish lasting friendship between Britain and India.

Meet in Two Sections

Indian members of the provincial legislative assemblies of Bengal and Punjab will be asked to meet in two sections, one representing Moslem majority districts and the other the rest of the provinces. Should either part decide by a majority vote in favor of partition, the division will take place. Sind's legislative assembly will decide on partition at a special meeting.

If Punjab decides upon partition, a referendum will be held among the electors of the adjacent northwest provinces to decide their course. Arrangements for British Baluchistan will be announced later. In the predominantly Moslem Sylhet province of Assam, a referendum will be held if neighboring Bengal is split.

If and when partition of India is decided upon, representatives to be elected in Pakistan, the Moslem state, will form a constituent assembly to write their own constitution.

"His Majesty's government wish to make it clear," Attlee said, "that they have no intention of attempting to frame any ultimate constitution for India. This is a matter for the Indians themselves. Nor is there anything in this plan to preclude negotiations between communities for a United India."

Attlee said considerable progress already had been made toward evolving a constitution for India by the constituent assembly representatives of the provinces of Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces, Berar, Assam, Otissa and the Northwest Frontier Provinces, all dominated by the Hindu Congress Party.

But the Moslem League—including a majority of the representatives of Bengal, Punjab and Sind, as well as the representatives of British Baluchistan—decided not to participate in that constituent assembly. Thus it was to that vast region that the offer of partition actually applied.

The Prime Minister said the position of the hundreds of princely states in India remained unchanged under the plan. Britain remains the paramount authority in those states until the final British withdrawal next year.

40 Million Lack Health Service, Says Parran

Chicago, June 3 (U.P.)—Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, said today that 40 million persons in the United States have no real health service.

Dr. Parran

"They live where there is no health officer to plan a comprehensive public health program, no public health nurse to assist with their health problems; and no sanitary engineer to assure them of a healthful environment," Parran said.

Parran led a symposium on health at the National Congress of Parents and Teachers' fiftieth annual convention. He praised the P-TA for choosing health "as one of the four pillars of your jubilee year."

Nurse Shortage Analyzed

Health service was the primary medical need, he said, and he urged delegates to work to establish "good local health units" in their individual communities. He said some communities were pooling resources to create such units, serving several communities and sometimes several counties.

Hortense Gilbert, director of New York City Department of Health's Bureau of Nursing, reported that the shortage of trained nursing personnel had arisen from growing needs for personnel rather than departure "from the ranks."

Dr. George S. Stevenson, medical director of the national committee for mental hygiene, told the delegates that good psychiatrists tend to shun public service because they are not permitted to do the "full range of work that is necessary."

Dorothy Thompson, author and columnist, told the convention that under American educational system the teacher had become, "a sort of business machine to check the proper answers to proper questions."

"If people will spend more for liquor and cosmetics than they spend for the education of their children, the teacher has to be reduced to a business machine and a hack," she said.

Conferees Ask Clayton for World Wool Plan

Senate and House conferees on the controversial wool bill, yesterday urged the State Department to attempt to work out a world-wide program for orderly marketing of wool, Chairman George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) said.

Meeting with the committee in its initial session was Undersecretary of State William L. Clayton.

Clayton told the committee that Australia and the United Kingdom were willing to discuss such an agreement, Aiken said.

Clayton is said to have urged the committee to knock out a 50-per cent import fee on wool—contained in the House bill passed a week ago.

Such a fee, in addition to the regular wool tariff, would have a "disrupting effect" on the Administration's foreign trade program, Clayton said.

Undersecretary of Agriculture Dodd, who first recommended the import fee provision, also attended yesterday's meeting. Aiken said Dodd "was inclined to go along with the State Department" in opposing the import fee provision.

Clayton was given a hearing by the committee because he had not had a chance to testify before the House Agriculture Committee on the measure, Aiken said. Clayton hurried home from Geneva to testify but arrived after the House committee had acted.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Inflation Saps Jap Recovery; U. S. Will Have to Aid in Cure

By A. T. Steele
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

This is the fourth of a series of articles on the occupation of Japan as it approaches the end of its second year.

Tokyo, June 3.—A grave and growing menace to our reform program in Japan is the alarming deterioration of the Japanese economy. The inflationary crisis affects, to greater or less degree, every phase of Japan's national existence. It endangers several of the major aims of the occupation. It touches also the pocketbook of the American taxpayer.

With the struggle for existence uppermost in their minds, the Japanese people can hardly be expected to bend a too enthusiastic ear to our preachings on democratic ideals and practices.

The picture is a classic one of spiraling inflation featured by acute shortages of most essential goods and by rising prices pursued—at a slower pace—by increasing wage scales. Wages have multiplied more than six times since the occupation began; but effective prices have gone so high that very few families are able to live within their incomes. Most city dwellers are selling off personal possessions to make up the deficit.

Huge Black Market

A huge and voracious black market is largely nullifying the feeble efforts of the Japanese government to enforce controls. Meanwhile, currency in circulation has jumped from 28 billion yen to 122 billion in the past year. This is not runaway inflation, but it is perilously close to it.

It has been apparent for many months that Japan's economic situation was building up, like a thunderhead, to an ugly climax. The causes of Japan's plight are both external and internal, and so also must be the cures. Gen. Douglas MacArthur has wisely underlined the desirability for an early peace treaty, a quick solution of the reparations problem and the earliest possible resumption of private international trade. The procrastination of the Far Eastern Commission on reparations certainly contributed to Japan's economic decline. Since no clear line was drawn between those industries which were exempt from reparations and those which were not, Japanese factory owners have refused to invest money and effort in plants which might later be seized. Combined with this is a serious scarcity of raw materials, some of which can be obtained only from abroad.

Japanese at Fault

These external factors—beyond direct control either of General MacArthur or the Japanese government—help to account for Japan's inability, so far, to overcome the crisis. But they are only part of the story. The future of the Japanese government to put its own house in order has been an important contributory cause. Its policy, in general, has been an important contributory cause. Its "laissez faire" backed by the conviction that "the United States will see us through."

It is a paradox of the occupation that while General MacArthur is relieved in his over-all directives from any responsibility for the strengthening of the Japanese economy, a stable Japanese economy is at the same time an essential requisite to the success of our whole program in Japan. The exemption from responsibility is understandable. General MacArthur not only lacks the staff to take over Japan's economic worries, but if he did so the Japanese government would be more inclined than ever to lie down and "let Mac do it," meanwhile passing the buck for all its shortcomings to the occupation.

Nevertheless, whether we like it or not, we are up to our ears in Japan's economic future. The occupation authorities have issued numerous directives and "suggestions" to the Japanese government on matters of economic reform, but they have been less aggressive in forcing action than the situation at times seemed to warrant. The nonresponsibility position of the Americans has made it difficult for the Japanese to pass the baby, it has given them a fine opportunity to dawdle and delay. This was especially evident in the organization of the Economic Stabilization Board, a Japanese organ which was to have been the key to the whole problem of economic stabilization. Conceived in April, 1946, the board was not established until August and has been a political football ever since.

General MacArthur's concern finally reached such a point in March that he dispatched a strong and critical letter to Prime Minister Yoshida demanding "early and vigorous steps" to implement economic and financial controls. At about the same time, the Allied Council for Japan was asked to offer its advice and recommendations on the wage-price problems.

Moves Were Late

These moves were heartening but late. It is clear that no man or group of men could have prevented some measure of inflation in Japan within existing limitations. But it does seem probable that a more vigorous approach early in the game from both the Americans and Japanese could have slowed up the deterioration.

Japan is a defeated enemy and her economic woes would be of little concern to Americans were it not that in the long run the United States will probably bear the main burden of financing Japan's economic rehabilitation. At the moment we are officially obligated only to provide Japan with sufficient foodstuffs and materials to forestall disease, unrest and starvation. However, one does not have to be clairvoyant to see that our aims go much farther. Japan will not cease to be a burden on the American taxpayer until she has put her economy on a balanced basis. The longer that is postponed the more money will be required in credits and contributions.

General MacArthur has made it clear to the Japanese government that imports of American food into this country are calculated on a basis of minimum requirements. This means that their size is not necessarily affected by inflationary tendencies. Although American food supplies constitute a lien against Japanese exports, the deficit owing us already exceeds 180 million dollars and is growing. Additionally, the Japanese are receiving from the United States quantities of raw cotton and other materials necessary to the partial rehabilitation of Japanese industry. The cost of the cotton will be largely liquidated through the sale of finished textiles to other Asiatic nations. For her part, Japan is sending us raw silk and limited amounts of raw materials left over from her wartime stocks. These are only stop-gap arrangements but they have helped avert complete Japanese collapse.

A badly disjointed national budget has aggravated Japan's inflationary dilemma. Last year the Japanese government went into the red 75 billion yen. This year there is wishful talk of balancing the budget, but the prospect is negligible.

Makeshift construction is in progress everywhere in Japan, but it will be many years before minimum housing needs can be provided. Japan requires 4 million new homes to make up for the destruction of war. Food is more plentiful than a year ago, thanks to emergency shipments from the United States. The nutritional level is now 1900 calories a person a day—about the same as during the war. Yet over-all living standards are appallingly low.

The remarkable results achieved in the control of epidemic diseases is a tribute to the work of the public health and welfare section of the S. C. A. P.—one of the brightest spots of the occupation. Although there is little malnutrition, the growing death rate from tuberculosis (six times that of the United States) reflects a steady undermining of Japanese vitality. Investigation has shown that one third of the Japanese people are suffering from chronic malnutrition.

Tomorrow: "Overpopulation is adjudged Japan's number one war criminal."

Rescued Culvert Victim Proves to Be Raccoon

Philadelphia (U.P.).—It sounded like a baby crying outdoors, so Mrs. Louise Schaffer got out of bed, opened the front door and listened. The crying was pathetic—like a child in trouble. A newspaper carrier, Harry Vierlinck, came along and traced the whimpering to the mouth of a deep culvert. He could hear thrashing below in the sewer. Vierlinck, lowered the carrier belt from his papers into the darkness.

"Catch on," he called to whatever-it-was.

FDIC Ready to Repay Most of U. S. Funds

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, formed in 1933 to insure bank deposits, has made so much money it is returning most of the Government funds invested in it.

Marriner Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, yesterday told Congress FDIC plans to pay back all but 50 million dollars of its original capital of 289 million.

Of this, 139 million is stock held by the Federal Reserve System. This stock was purchased by the Federal Reserve out of "gold increment" or profits resulting from the devaluation of gold.

An additional 100 million dollars will be returned to the Treasury Department. It is part of 150 million dollars in Government funds advanced to FDIC by the Treasury.

FDIC now has a surplus of over 800 million dollars, Eccles said.

TO EVERY YOUNG MAN

HIGH SCHOOL

A CHALLENGE TO THE CLASS OF '47

Your country needs you now. The future of a free America may rest on your decision.

There is no Draft today to put you in the Army. Yours is the first graduating class since 1940 that faces a free choice. But with that freedom, as with every freedom, goes responsibility.

The nation has put the maintenance of a strong, alert, defensive force squarely up to you. This is the only country in the world that dares to raise and maintain a million-man Army by voluntary enlistment, in the American tradition. The duty of keeping our Army ready for emergencies is shared by every citizen — for never before, in peacetime, has the need for it been greater.

Our freedom, our ideals, the safety of our families, depend on a world peace backed by firmness and justice. It's your Army now — yours to keep strong.

Joining the Army as a volunteer may mean some sacrifice to you. On the other hand, you have much to gain from the experience. Sound physical condition, training in leadership, world travel and adventure, the comradeship of a fine group of young men, a job with a real future at better pay than you can get in most civilian work — all these make the Army an excellent career for young men who can measure up to its high standards. And you will be entitled to educational benefits under the GI Bill of Rights, if you enlist before Congress officially terminates the war.

Businessmen See 'Mild Recession' in Fall

By The Associated Press

The Senate-House Economic Committee said yesterday that results of a survey of businessmen do not give any "real support" to the theory that the United States may be nearing a depression.

In a formal statement issued by chairman Taft (R., Ohio), the committee said a majority of 583 persons who filled out questionnaires in a survey by Dun & Bradstreet "anticipate a mild recession in business this fall."

But, the committee added, "answers to the economic questions do not give any real support to the theory that we are nearing a depression, since in their own business employers expect an increase in production, sales and output per man-hour."

Ordering open hearings beginning June 23, Taft announced the committee will call businessmen, economists, labor leaders, farmers and industrialists for an inquiry into the general economic situation.

He said prices and wages will figure largely in the investigation, directed primarily toward preparing a report for the next Congress designed to show whether Government action can prevent any threatened business depression.

Taft previously told a reporter that President Truman and the Democratic Administration seem to have abandoned their campaign to keep prices down in favor of "heavy spending abroad that will keep them up."

Taft said it is his view that loans to other countries for the purchase of goods here increase the competition on home markets for those goods and thus force prices up.

Truman Silent on Prices

While he supported recent legislation for the 400-million-dollar Greek-Turkish aid program, the Republican leader said he did so "reluctantly" and with the understanding that the program would be wound up as quickly as possible.

Mr. Truman, who has been trying to talk prices down for weeks, has said nothing on the subject since a May 15 news conference when he said the country could avoid a depression if it just used common sense and didn't let greedy people get control. He reiterated his contention then that some prices were too high.

Since that time, Mr. Truman has spent much of his time at the bedside of his ill mother in Missouri.

White Russians Realize Aid, Says UNRRA Official

Moscow, June 3 (U.P.)—Ted Waller, nearing the end of his assignment as UNRRA chief in Byelorussia, told a press conference that the White Russians are well aware of UNRRA's help and that they feel "the greatest gratitude and friendship" toward the contributing nations.

"UNRRA supplies (in Byelorussia) have been efficiently and honestly distributed," Waller said. "There has been practically no pilferage, and no evidence of speculation in UNRRA goods.

"It is an incontrovertible fact that the people know that they've had substancial assistance from the UNRRA countries, and particularly from the United States," he declared.

If you didn't there's one on the great seal of the Department of Agriculture.

It has been there since 1895 when Secretary J. Sterling Morton ordered the seal. The only instructions he gave the artist who designed it was to "put a plow in it."

A letter from a keen observer last week sent department officials into a study of old department history. They learned that 50 years ago left-handed plows were still in use in Maryland and some parts of Virginia.

In colonial times they were common in these areas, but were never used in other States.

Also, they learned that somebody made the same complaint 50 years ago and got the same reply.

The department has no plans to change the design.

Photographs Measure Penicillin Strength

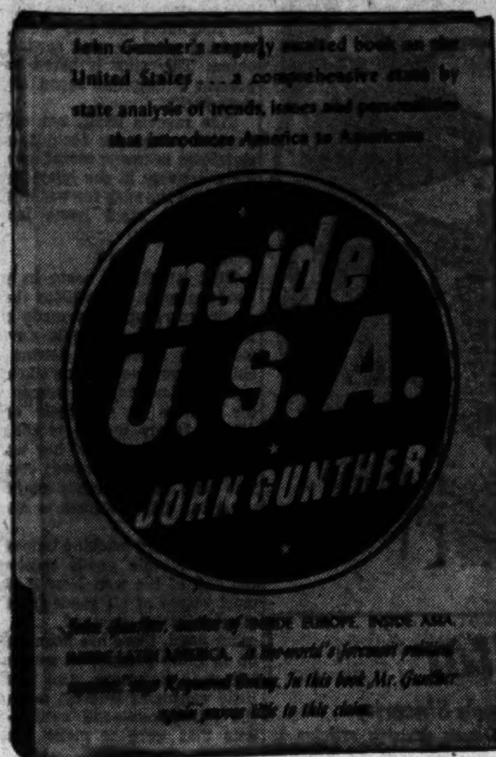

San Francisco (U.P.)—Scientists at the University of California college of pharmacy are using a quick photographic method to measure the potency of penicillin.

The process cuts the time required to measure potency from 16 to 3 hours. College officials said it would be valuable to the pharmaceutical industry because manufacturers must state the potency of every bottle of penicillin. Each batch of the drug has a different strength.

Welfare Department

When President Truman last year submitted to the Senate the Executive Reorganization Plan which transferred several important related agencies to the Federal Security Agency, he urged upon Congress the wisdom of elevating these coordinated Government activities to Cabinet status. The Taft-Fulbright bill to create a Federal Department of Health, Education and Social Security would carry the President's recommendation into effect. We hope heartily that the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, which has held extensive hearings on the proposal, will accord it unanimous indorsement in voting on it tomorrow.

There is, of course, nothing new about the idea of establishing a Federal department in this realm. Presidents Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt successively proposed it to past Congresses. Now, however, there is a greater urgency than ever previously existed. The war has revealed tragic defects in the health and education of Americans, and the postwar period has subjected our institutions in these fields to serious strains. These are not matters of merely local concern, although local initiative and local action, stimulated and coordinated through Federal aid, are essential to solution of the problems they present. The Taft-Fulbright bill would preserve local responsibility while affording effective national leadership.

The Federal Government has for some years played a vital part in these fields, although on a somewhat haphazard and uncoordinated basis. Grants-in-aid for health, education and related activities already give the Federal Security Agency responsibility for the allocation of appropriations totaling more than three quarters of a billion dollars and requiring the services of some 33,000 Federal employes. Thus the agency has the scope of a department. It needs the status as well in order to give its work the requisite authority and prestige. Its functions will go to the very heart of the national welfare—the strengthening of community and family life which are the essential elements in our societal structure.

Mr. Marshall's Task

It is said that the only task that has been given to the new planning division in the State Department is the preparation of a plan for reconstruction in Europe on a continental scale. Judging by the events which have been set in motion in Hungary, the planners will have to work fast. The danger spot is recognizably Italy, where Alcide de Gasperi has just set up a new government without Communist participation. Pending some "continental plan," our foreign policy is at present limited to stopgap treatment. Secretary Marshall, for instance, has sought to give aid and comfort to the De Gasperi government by issuing a welcoming statement. But something more than soft words is needed at this juncture. To be sure, the Secretary of State hints at "the help we shall give them," meaning the Italians. But a statement which omits a specific announcement of help may not do De Gasperi, who is already under fire as a stooge of America, the service that Mr. Marshall intended. It might have been better to defer the statement until our Government is ready to release Italy's frozen assets in America.

What must be planned in addition to economic aid on a continental scale is our case before the General Assembly of the United Nations in September. It is clear from the news from Moscow that the Russians intend to train on the Assembly a barrage of propaganda against America. We must not allow ourselves to be thrown on the defensive, as we were in the last Assembly in connection with disarmament. In the struggle to save free institutions world opinion must be mobilized. Examples of issues on which we should take the initiative are the new situation in Hungary and Russia's attempt to impede the functioning of the European Commission, which, it had been hoped, would be the instrumentality of a reconstruction scheme.

The planning of our case before the Assembly calls for the best staff work of which the State Department is capable. This requires, it seems to us, better recognition of the United Nations in the hierarchy of the State Department. It is absurd to have an Assistant Secretary for Communications and only a division chief for United Nations affairs. This is not the first time we have urged a backstop for our United Nations delegate, Mr. Warren Austin, in the person of an Assistant Secretary. There is a danger that, after having "oversold" the United Nations as the defender of the peace, the Administration may go to the other extreme, and withhold full recognition of its function as a world forum. The best assurance that this will not happen would be the appointment of an Assistant Secretary for United Nations Affairs. Certainly the Soviet Union does not underrate the United Nations Assembly as a battleground in the struggle it is waging to extend its influence.

Labor Board

The National Labor Relations Board will continue to function if the Taft-Hartley bill becomes law, but it will be a very different sort of agency. In the first place, it would have five members instead of three, but it would be authorized to function in panels of three, thus dividing among five men a work load which has been too heavy for the present board. Probably the chairman would be left relatively free of the case load to attend to administrative duties. Incidentally, the members' salaries would be boosted from $10,000 to $12,000.

Another division of labor would be effected by making the general counsel a presidential appointee and giving him "final authority, on behalf of the board," in respect of investigations, the issuance of complaints and the prosecution of charges involving unfair labor practices. This is a compromise between leaving the prosecuting and judging functions unseparated in the hands of the board and making a complete separation, as proposed by the House. The general counsel would still be part of the board, but he would presumably exercise his own discretion in the preparation of cases. We do not know how this experiment will work out in practice, but at least it is an effort to get away from the intermingling of prosecuting and judging functions. Some observers who have been close to the board believe that this reform would greatly speed up its lagging work. If it proves successful, the technique may be applied to a number of other quasi-judicial administrative agencies.

Certainly there would be a distinct advantage in the abolition of the old board's review section which stood between the trial examiners and the board members, influencing their decisions and blurring the responsibility of each. Under the new setup it is contemplated that most of the complaints of unfair labor practices will be heard first by trial examiners. The examiner would make a report and a recommended order, and if there were no exceptions, that order would become effective. Appeals could be heard, of course, by the board itself, but there would be no intermediate juggling of findings by unnamed employes working deep within what one investigator called "the bowels of the agency."

The reformed NLRB would also be required to conduct its proceedings, "so far as practicable, in accordance with the rules of evidence applicable in the district courts of the United States." The old law had wholly discarded the rules of evidence, which, after all, are designed only to insure a fair and honest trial. Congress now makes it evident that the NLRB should take advantage of these rules unless there is some good reason for not doing so. Under the old law, too, the NLRB's findings of fact were conclusive and binding upon the courts on appeal "if supported by evidence." Although the Supreme Court interpreted this to mean substantial evidence, the board was often accused in its early years of making findings that had some support in the evidence before it but which could not stand in the face of all the evidence. Congress now seeks to eliminate all question about it. The Taft-Hartley bill would instruct the board to act on the preponderance of evidence. And the courts would be required to consider its findings conclusive only if "supported by substantial evidence on the record considered as a whole."

These are technical changes, of course, but they seem to us to be changes in the direction of fairness. Even more important would be the change in the character of the board. It would be transformed from a special prosecutor of employers on behalf of unions to an agency for the suppression of unfair labor practices by both employers and employes. Among the unfair labor practices of unions and employes it would be empowered to prevent are coercion of workers in the exercise of their collective bargaining rights, strikes in support of secondary boycotts or jurisdictional fights, the charging of excessive initiation fees, and attempts to enforce feather-bedding practices. The net effect, in our opinion, is to even the score as between employers and unions by making them equally liable to punishment for indefensible practices.

Unequal Justice

When Serge Rubenstein was convicted of having used his wealth and influence to evade military service in the war, a Federal judge sentenced him to 2½ years in prison. Whatever may have been Mr. Rubenstein's just deserts for a crime that seemed particularly odious in view of all the benefits he has derived from membership in the American society, he can congratulate himself on having gotten off very lightly indeed in comparison with many of the conscientious objectors found guilty of violating the Selective Service Law. It can be said in respect of the COs, as it cannot be said in respect of Mr. Rubenstein, that they were motivated, however mistakenly, by religious scruples and considerations of principle. Yet many of them, appearing before Federal judges, were sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

The disparity here is but a recent illustration of inequalities in the sentencing of Federal offenders which have long stained our pretensions to the meting out of equal justice under law. With the best intentions in the world, different judges impose vastly different punishments for offenses scarcely distinguishable from one another. Sentences should, of course, be made to fit the criminal rather than the crime. This is to say that they should be designed not to inflict punishment but to protect society and to bring about, when possible, the rehabilitation of those who have committed antisocial acts. Thus disparities in sentencing for a given type of offense may be warranted. But the disparities in our Federal Courts have seemed so haphazard and even capricious as to give an impression of unequal justice.

As long ago as 1942, the Committee on Punishment for Crime of the Judicial Conference of Senior Circuit Court Judges, under the chairmanship of Judge John J. Parker, recommended what we considered then, and still consider, a thoroughly sensible change in sentencing procedure. The committee's recommendation envisaged creation of a board of corrections which would serve judges in an advisory capacity in the determination of sentences. Initially, a judge would allot the maximum sentence when he thought an offender merited more than a year in prison; the board would then study the case with the aid of advice from prison authorities, psychiatrists and experts in criminology; within six months it would make a recommendation to the judge who would then pass final sentence, accepting or modifying the recommendation as he saw fit. This retention of ultimate authority in the court ought to answer the objections which Federal District judges have lodged against the proposal.

We hope that the American Law Institute which is meeting here this week will spur Congress to fresh consideration of this intelligent modernization of our penal system. Legislation to effect it is before this session as it has been before earlier ones. An additional important aspect of the proposed corrections board would be its handling of parole responsibilities, so that sentences and parole modification of them could be coordinated. Under present practices, as former Attorney General Biddle put it some time ago, "the men who administer correctional treatment to Federal prisoners and who have no control over the length of the sentences find themselves in the position of a doctor who is not permitted to decide when a cure has been effected." Cure should be the guiding aim of our penal processes.

Greenland Bases

The United States is eager to retain its wartime bases in Greenland. Secretary of State Marshall has made plain that the Greenland bases remain a factor of great importance in the defense of the Western Hemisphere. Consequently, our Government hopes to be able to work out an agreement with Denmark whereby the bases in question will continue to be available for legitimate hemispheric defense purposes. But whatever the arrangement is to be, it will be worked out in free and fair negotiations between the two countries. There is not the slightest fear that the United States might send a group of Americanized Danes to Copenhagen to take over the reins of the Danish government, or that we might provoke a revolt in Greenland in order to retain our defense position there.

American forces have already been withdrawn from Iceland and the Azores. From the strictly nationalistic viewpoint, it would have been greatly to our advantage to retain naval and air bases in these island outposts. The basis of American foreign policy, however, is the cultivation of good will among our neighbors and not the forcing of our will upon them. We recognize the right of every people to control their own territory and if wartime defense arrangements cannot be carried over into peacetime under mutually satisfactory agreements, adjustments have to be made accordingly. Denmark may well recognize the advantages to herself of joint defense plans with the United States for Greenland, but in any event the problem will be worked out without coercion, subtle penetration of the smaller country or encroachment upon its rights.

Here is the other side of the Truman Doctrine. While we are helping weak and war-torn lands to maintain their independence, we are also adhering to a policy of fairness and neighborliness to those countries which put their safety or the safety of some of their territory into our hands during the recent war. No doubt this course of action will lead to some disappointments and some setbacks in a world in which naked force is still playing so large a role. But it will pay large dividends in good will, and certainly in the end it will strengthen the forces of democracy and understanding on which every stable hope of peace must be based.

RAIN

The rain stops at the window; it cannot get by this long glass:
And I like to think of the miles it travelled to get as far as it has,
Over city and stone, over spire and chimney and the tree-damp park,
To leap through the air and come to rest on my sill in the dark.
I sit and look at the shining globes that wait for a gathering force
To bend them away and send them down on an earthward course,
Knowing the land is a dark and tranquil sea
where they will go down,
And deep between rivers of grass and stone will utterly drown.
They are my visitors, these drops on the window's edge and out of the sky,
And I look at their shining selves and salute them as they go by.

"Up to the President"

May I suggest that the four reasons given in your editorial of May 30, "Up to the President," are not good or sufficient reasons for rejecting the proposed reduction of income taxes?

Number one asserts that a tax reduction should not be voted prior to the enactment of the annual appropriation bills. About half of those bills have been passed and the others are far enough advanced in committee to indicate the approximate budget. The current surplus and budget savings now in evidence will cover the tax reduction proposed. Hence the date for acting on taxes, this week or next, is mere quibbling.

Number two asserts that tax reduction will add to inflation by putting more purchasing power in the hands "of the people." There has been no more nonsense uttered and printed on any subject in the past few years than about "inflation." Suffice it to say for present purposes that there has been no inflation so great as the inflation of Government spending, and that purchasing power in the hands of the people affects inflation no more than the same power in the hands of the Government.

Number three is the assertion that piecemeal tax changes imperil a complete overhauling of the tax structure. We have been talking about this complete overhauling for 20 years at least. No immediate change can in the slightest degree hamper a complete overhauling, any more than a hundred piecemeal changes in the past have done. The complete overhaul, if it ever is made, will consist merely of several score piecemeal changes at once.

Number four asserts that a tax reduction now will imperil grants for foreign aid in the future. This point your editorial elaborates at length, with an effort to forecast what a future Congress will do about a future set of facts. It seems not quite sensible to rest the present need for tax revenue on what may happen in future.

There is one common-sense reason for opposing tax reduction now, but it is not mentioned among your four. That reason is that any surplus may well be used to reduce the public debt. There are probably a hundred reasons for suggesting some form of tax reduction differing from the bill now in Congress, but the Congress has had time to consider all of them and the committees have rejected most of them.

To suggest that taxes be levied to support the Government, and not as a means of implementing a planned economy nor as a means to political advantage, is too simple and old-fashioned to merit more than a passing thought. Nevertheless it is a thought.

Housing Pictures

Mr. O. J. Dekom (letters published May 21 and 31) and all those who believe there is no need to worry about the housing situation in the United States and that Mr. Block's cartoons present a distorted picture, would do well to pass by the northeast corner of Connecticut ave. and M st. nw. and see the display of pictures of Washington taken during 1947.

The photographs were entrants in a photographic contest called "Pictures Talk Housing," sponsored by the Citizens Council for Community Planning, a nonprofit organization of citizens and civic groups. If the dilapidated house in Mr. Block's cartoon of May 16 is "a figment of his very fertile imagination," whence came the subject matter of all those photographs, Mr. Dekom? Or does not the camera tell the truth?

Noisy Fliers

I am firmly convinced that it is wise to continue the training of reserve fliers of both the Army and Navy. I wonder, however, if it is not possible for these men who are flying planes to and from the Anacostia Naval Base to accomplish their training missions with a little less noise.

Saturdays and Sundays in the neighborhood of the Anacostia Air Base are constant nightmares of droning airplane motors as the planes fly low over residences in the area. It is impossible to enjoy any of the excellent radio programs until after sundown and the accomplishment of even a one-minute conversation without shouting is a minor miracle. I am no authority on such matters, but I suspect that if the aviators and their commanding officers were a little more considerate of the people on the ground a great amount of this fearsome noise could be avoided.

Wallace's Sincerity

If by such derisive articles as Alsops' you expect to keep people from Wallace's speeches, happily you will fail. I expect to hear him and shall go not as a yokel to see a two-headed calf but rather as an American citizen to hear another American citizen speak freely on subjects dear to the heart of every real American.

Henry Wallace used to be, to my mind, suspect as was Wendell Willkie. I always thought the latter took a walk from the Democratic Party to barnstorm the country—outyokel the yokels so that the voters would vote for Roosevelt in self-defense—but since our "free press" has almost unanimously attacked Henry Wallace I'm beginning to believe the gentleman is sincere.

Meridian Hill Concerts

I wonder why some organization doesn't sponsor a series of concerts at Meridian Hill similar to those held there a couple of years ago. As far as I was concerned—and this is also true of many others to whom I spoke—the concerts were highly successful and a great treat. The park is an ideal place for summer outdoor performances, and it seems a shame that the project has been dropped during the past couple of years.

War Service Appointee Plight

I am writing about the Government closed shop. Here is an angle of the present Federal employment situation which, strangely enough, has not received the attention it merits. I refer particularly to the plight of the so-called "war service appointees." A little less than justice, it seems to me, has been done to this neglected group.

In 1941, under cumbersome Federal employment procedures, it would have taken years to staff the new war agencies that were springing up like mushrooms. So a distress call was sent out. Volunteers were exhorted to show their patriotism by entering the Federal service. Repeated assurances were published that no civil service examinations would be required; that for the first time knowledge and experience would be accorded as much weight as the theretofore sacrosanct fetish of "academic attainments."

What happened? Partially freed from those clumsy restraints, business and industrial leaders who had already come to Washington to help further the war effort began to go over the lists of their acquaintances and associates in an endeavor to persuade those of known ability and capacity to drop everything and come to Washington. Indeed in many cases where some slight reluctance was encountered, a considerable degree of moral pressure was exerted to achieve the desired results.

The response was, in general, gratifying. Many men, too old for active military service but eager to help in their country's struggle, left their settled ways of life, their then employment and, in some cases, their businesses and hurried to Washington.

The results were not always fortunate. Many could not effect the transition. They could not easily adapt themselves to governmental methods, or for some other reason turned out to be square pegs in round holes. But within the course of a year or so this group was either eliminated or else eliminated itself.

Others, however, developed a real liking and a distinct flair for Government service. They progressed rapidly to positions of increasing responsibility—thus duplicating their former experiences and amply justifying the confidence of those responsible for attracting them to the Federal service.

On the strength of what they had achieved and their faith that outstanding achievement must surely be recognized they concluded, quite properly I think, that they had won a permanent place in the Government service. In most cases they severed the few remaining ties which still bound them to private life and, in effect, made the divorce final.

To these people the present reduction in force order, directed as it is with conspicuous particularity against "war-service" appointees, comes as an unusually hard and grossly unfair blow. Thus there is the depressing spectacle of hundreds of able men, too long divorced from their private connections to make relocation easy, and too old to be favorably considered as new employes, cast adrift for the crime of having sacrificed personal considerations and personal gain when their country needed them. In addition they carry back to the struggle to reenter private competitive enterprise as a badge of this service not an honorable discharge, not a laudatory scroll, but instead a curt and noncommittal dismissal notice. And this encouraging document is what they have to show a potential employer already skeptical (and perhaps properly so) of the practical value to himself of anyone with too long a record of Government service. It is a grim but inescapable fact that to many employers such a record is an ineradicable stigma.

Far more important, however, than the plight of the single individual is the wanton waste of good human material which this stupid application of a slide-rule retention system involves—a system which, in too many cases, blindly sacrifices demonstrated ability, experience and maturity of judgment in favor of the so-called "permanent status" or "career" employes with a record of questionable academic attainments and little else to recommend them.

The President has publicly stated, upon more than one occasion, that it is becoming increasingly difficult to attract good people to the Government service. It is not too difficult to understand why. Here, as is so frequently the case in the Federal service, action and reaction are equal and the result is the usual stalemate.

'Dollar Down' Temptation

By Malvina Lindsay

Spending Test

WHETHER or not another keep-up-with-the-Joneses mood is in the offing will soon be determined. Removal of credit controls, which now seems likely, will test the spending temper of the Nation.

Mrs. Jones, the fabulous woman of the 1920s who kept the families of her community in turmoil because she had everything first, has been ominously quiet for a long time. But some believe that if installment buying is made easier, neighborhoods will begin to buzz with talk of her refrigerator, radio, rugs, bedroom suites, dishwasher, air conditioner, dust collector.

However, others predict she will be more wary in her buying—that her neighbors will envy chiefly her washing machine and sewing machine. This view is based on the present widespread mood of cautious thrift.

This reveals itself, not only in bargain prices for orchids and a slowdown in movie attendance, but more actively in the home sewing spree and the rush for washing machines and other home laundry equipment.

THE BIGGEST boom in piece goods sales since the 1920s (before manufacture of ready made clothing reached large scale development) is reported. Sewing machine manufacturers can't keep up with the demand, and women wait for months to get their orders filled. Hardy indeed is the customer who can elbow her way to a pattern or notion goods counter. The high cost of ready made apparel has driven women to making their own.

The washing machine topped the list of durable goods wanted at the end of the war. Now it is the most scarce of all goods from the standpoint of demand. On the other hand, there has been a slowup in radio production and an increase in inventory. And there is little consumer interest as yet in the miraculous—and costly—gadgets that were to make postwar life a dream of ease.

Mrs. Jones and her followers, of course, may show a more expansive buying attitude when they no longer have to pay from a fifth to a third down and the balance in 15 months. It is sheer lack of money to make big down payments that has held many customers back, the House Banking Committee was told by manufacturers, retailers and labor representatives. Many veterans of modest income were reported unable to furnish their homes because of credit controls.

THOSE WHO WANT credit controls removed insist the Joneses' cohorts will not lose their heads this time if buying is made easier for them. Such action, it is maintained, is the only way to stimulate demand for durable goods, on whose expanding production continued prosperity so greatly depends.

The habit of buying on credit is taking firm hold of the Nation again now as living costs keep rising and eating up wartime savings. People are saying increasingly, "Charge it!" as they find their incomes lagging behind their standards of living. Installment buying is up strikingly over last year, rates of savings have markedly decreased. Consumer credit at the end of April was the highest in history.

But so far the mood of credit buying has been far different from the reckless flamboyant one of the 1920s. It is not underwritten by the fool's paradise security that followed World War I. The atom bomb hangs over the heads of all as they plan their future. People also have the sobering memory of 1929, and hear constant warning talk of another depression.

What is most troubling in the credit situation is that reckless buying is most likely to prevail among those who can least afford to gamble with debt, while a hide-the-money-in-a-sack attitude born of fear may hang on among those best buttressed to buy the things they need.

Amphibious Operations

In your editorial reply to Admiral Zacharias of May 28, "Integrating Our Armed Services," there is a misstatement of fact which I wish to call to your attention and which I feel sure you will desire to correct. In questioning the admiral's statement that the Marine Corps was responsible for the development of the technique of amphibious operations, which as he so accurately states, was one of the greatest factors in winning the war; you write: "There was not a single Marine present" in the Normandy landing conducted by General Eisenhower."

This is not true. I, a Marine colonel, was there and so were two other Marine colonels and one Marine major, all of whom served under General Eisenhower and took an active and important part in the planning, training and amphibious assault of the German held beaches in France.

The technique of the amphibious landing employed by the Army in its landings on the continent was solely Marine Corps technique which I had studied for 23 years before "D" Day.

Feeding Our Enemies

I am not a hard-boiled Hannah—rather the reverse—but I burn to a crisp over all the commotion and discussions relative to the feeding of Germany, and, incidentally, Japan. It is commendable to consider and share, but lamentable to be a "sucker." What very short memories we have!

If either Germany or Japan had come out on top, would they feed us? I say let them starve!

Italian Colonies

By Sumner Welles

Pressure For Restoration

WHEN THE Italian peace treaty was negotiated the major powers were unable to reach any decision upon the disposal of the Italian colonies. They consequently agreed that if no decision could be obtained within 12 months after ratification of the treaty the problem would be referred to the United Nations Assembly.

The deputies of the Foreign Ministers will meet in London this month to reopen the negotiation. Until recently it seemed likely that Italy would be refused any share in the administration of her former colonies.

France is now, however, urging the restoration of Italy's control over the North African colonies. Sentiment in favor of such a solution is making itself felt in Washington.

Cirenaica and Tripolitania came into Italy's possession before the First World War. Because of the lack of any extensive water supply these provinces cannot support a dense population. But they have provided homes for a considerable percentage of Italy's excess population. About 750,000 Italian emigrants had settled there before 1939. With typical Italian industry, they transformed regions which had been largely barren into productive farm land. The entire area was closely integrated within Italy's national economy. A large part of the revenues of the Italian people was spent in the development of these two colonies.

THERE IS NO moral justification for depriving the Italian people of them. No strategic considerations demand a change. From the standpoint of the future stability of the Mediterranean, the political and economic reasons which warrant continued Italian control are far greater than those which can be advanced in favor of a change of administration.

Italian Somaliland and Eritrea are in a different category. The former has no economic, but merely strategic, importance. Eritrea is the only region through which Ethiopia can obtain a sovereign outlet to the sea. The proper solution for the disposal of these two colonies would seem to be United Nations trusteeship until the native populations are prepared for autonomy, with satisfaction of Ethiopia's legitimate aspirations for a seaport in Eritrea. Only a relatively small number of Italians have gone to East Africa. The colonies have been a drain on Italy's resources. They represent Italy's lamentable experiment in aggressive imperialism. There is no valid reason why she should retain them.

THE PRECISE position of the Soviet Union remains uncertain. The pretensions advanced by Mr. Molotov at an early stage of the Italian negotiations may have been put forward for bargaining purposes. It is, of course, clear that a Russian administration of Cirenaica would bring about precisely that change in the strategic control of the Mediterranean which the present foreign policy of the United States is intended to prevent. But it is equally clear that Moscow will not abandon its pretensions until a general European settlement is in prospect.

When Britain was fighting alone in 1940 she promised the Senussis in Cirenaica that these tribes would be given their independence at the end of the war. The United States was only subsequently informed of this commitment. The other members of the U. N. need surely not be bound by an individual British pledge which would dispose of a part of Italy's territory unless they regard such a commitment as expedient and desirable. The Senussis are entitled to their independence as soon as they demonstrate their capacity to assume the obligations involved. But the British pledge is not to be considered in itself a conclusive argument in favor of Great Britain's reported desire to secure control of Cirenaica, and especially of the port of Tobruk.

AMERICAN policy with regard to the disposal of the Italian colonies has been both timid and wavering. The American delegation went to the first meeting of the Foreign Ministers at London in September, 1945, and let it be understood that it favored an Italian administration of the North African colonies. Two weeks later the delegation was urging a U. N. administration. Since that time this Government's position has repeatedly shifted.

An Italian administration of Cirenaica and Tripolitania under the authority of the United Nations would promote Italian economic stability. It would do much to counteract the legitimate resentment which the Italian people feel because of the terms of the Italian peace treaty. A direct United Nations' administration of these colonies would be an unnecessary burden upon the resources of that organization. It would also inevitably give rise to the same kind of controversy between the major powers as that which we now witness in Trieste.

It would surely be the part of wisdom for the United States at the coming sessions in London to support the position taken by France, and to favor the establishment of an Italian administration of Tripolitania and Cirenaica as soon as Italy has been admitted to membership in the United Nations.

Athens' Scars Found Healed

By M. W. Fodor
Post Reporter

Athens, June 3.—Athens, the "violet-wreathed city" as she was called by the classic Greek poet, has witnessed a remarkable recovery. Her comeback has been swift and better than any of the other European cities this writer has visited.

Two and one half years ago the guns were booming, machine-gun fire swept the city streets and bombs had blasted gaping holes in its center.

Today the scars are no longer visible. The damaged houses have been rebuilt, the rubble removed. Only here and there, around Omonia (Concord) Square, does the visitor notice gaps between buildings.

Huge crowds surge the streets. If jay walking anywhere reaches the perfection of an art, Athens is the place.

On Sundays the crowds are always greater and they seem to love to watch the march of the dapper Evzons, wearing white kilt-like skirts and wide white sleeves which flop in the wind as they walk toward the monument of the Unknown Soldier on Syntagma Square.

This huge square is covered with tables and chairs belonging to a legion of cafes crowded with people discussing politics and business over their Turkish coffee.

One of the most noticeable changes in Athens—I was there less than a year ago—is the disappearance of the British from this gay picture. Previously the British army was everywhere.

Sitting on the balcony of the apartment of a prominent Athens lady, who, however, is known for her leftist sentiments, I listened to her musings: "First we had the Italian invasion, then came the German invasion, then the British invasion. I wonder how the American "invasion" will manifest itself?"

Not so long ago I was traveling in countries which were enduring "Russian invasion." Without uttering my thoughts, I wondered whether the lady would prefer Russian occupation.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Wolf In Sheep's Clothing

UNDERSECRETARY of State Will Clayton is a tall, soft-spoken Texan who believes deeply in free enterprise and free trade.

Childs

As a free trader, starting from scratch, Will Clayton has built one of the impressive private fortunes of his generation.

Now he is serving the Government as conscientiously as he once served his own private interests. His job is not an easy one. He is trying to persuade the other countries of the world that it is possible to revive the free-trade pattern.

The State Department has a plan for international trade organization. But before the other nations will accept that plan they want us to show our good faith by reducing tariffs and indicating in other ways that we intend to accept imports from abroad.

In April, Clayton went to Geneva, Switzerland, to promote the world-trade idea at an international conference. In the middle of that conference Congress threatened to pull the rug out from under the American proposals at Geneva. Clayton flew back to Washington to argue his case, not with skeptical foreigners, but with doubting and resentful members of Congress.

This is how the House put the world-trade plan in jeopardy. The House passed a bill which would make it possible under certain circumstances to raise by 50 per cent the tariff on wool coming into the United States. We were telling anybody who cared to listen that instead of lowering tariffs we proposed to raise them.

THE HOUSE bill represented the pressure of wool growers in this country to get a guaranteed market. They produce only a small fraction of the wool we use, and they produce it at a high cost and at a small margin of profit to themselves, if any. Yet they are distributed in States with comparatitvely scant population and so, they can make their political weight felt.

The wool story is a long and complicated one. During the war our Government bought wool at a support price, and the Government now holds 500 million pounds which cannot be sold under present law. The price has dropped to about half that of the wartime support price.

The Senate adopted a wool bill that did not contain the provision for a 50 per cent boost in tariff. There is a good chance that the Senate point of view will prevail and that the 50 per cent provision in the House bill will be knocked out. Even Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming, who comes from one of the wool States, has said he is for compromise, since he is convinced the President would veto the House bill and he wants help for wool growers in the form of a domestic subsidy.

When Clayton first returned from Geneva, he went down under an attack of flu. Now, after administration of large doses of penicillin, he is well enough to go up to Capitol Hill to battle for his goal.

Much harm has already been done by the action of the House. It was an indication to the delegates at Geneva of an attitude exactly the opposite of that which Clayton was urging. Perhaps if the final outcome is favorable, the damage can be repaired.

BUT ONE must say frankly that this a forlorn hope. The pressures that developed to protect the wool farmers will certainly be exerted again when farmers in other fields begin to find the going rough. Unless there is powerful and continuing resistance, the shadow of the wool bill may prove to be the shadow of the shape of things to come.

There is another pattern. It is the pattern of subsidies, of dumping on the world market, of imperialism.

If the plans for a world trade organization fail, that is the way it will go. The producer will be given a domestic subsidy. Under the subsidy the Government is likely to acquire surplus stocks. Then comes the pressure to unload those stocks. They cannot be disposed of at home without upsetting the support price. So they are dumped onto the world market.

This means a kind of competition that is in actuality economic warfare. We shall be competing on this level with Argentina and the Soviet Union, which have put their trade under complete state control. The pressure to do the same thing in this country, in order to hold our own in that warfare, will be very great. So the hope of free enterprise goes glimmering.

The proposed hike in the wool tariff must be blocked. Similar pressures must be resisted. Clayton has fought a gallant fight and he deserves better of Congress.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Merger And The National Safety

IN THE MORASS of current trivialities, great issues and great problems have a tendency to get lost. One such is the unification of the armed services. After months of hearings, chiefly remarkable for the pettifogging tactics of such opponents of unification as Senator E. V. Robertson of Wyoming, a bill is at last being reported to the Senate. Senate approval seems to be pretty well assured. If all goes well, the unification bill will then be jammed through the House, after curtailed hearings, at the close of the session. And Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal will probably be named to head the new combined defense establishment.

All this will be very fine—if it occurs. Despite obvious defects, the Senate bill is a genuine triumph for Maj. Gen. Lauris Norstad and Admiral Forrest Sherman, the two brilliant officers who are its real authors. As for the prospects of Forrestal's promotion, the President could find no better man for the immense task of inaugurating the new defense system. But since the bill has an excellent chance of getting lost in the general political shuffle, it is still highly relevant to point out some of the reasons why service unification remains one of the fundamental national problems.

THE PRESENT disunity of the services is responsible, for example, for the startling but undeniable fact that the United States is the only major power in the world without an agreed national strategy. In August, 1945, President Truman requested the august Joint Chiefs of Staff to reassess the strategic situation of this country, and to present recommendations for action, based upon this reassessment. But the corporate interests of the services would have been deeply affected by these recommendations, which would perforce have involved the roles and missions of the Army, Navy and Air Forces. And so the Joint Chiefs have never, to this day, succeeded in answering President Truman's letter, despite at least one stern reminder from the White House.

This basic division is in turn responsible, directly or indirectly, for all kinds of other omissions which would seem perfectly incredible if they were not accepted as quite a matter of course. One such is the failure to do anything truly decisive about the so-called Arctic frontier. The concept of the Air Staff, generally approved by the War Department General Staff, is that the main defense line of the United States has now become a great arc across the northern periphery of this hemisphere. Putting this concept into practice will demand the construction of costly bases, warning systems, and other installations. A sort of lip-service is being paid to the concept, in the form of a half-hearted program for testing the existing, and generally obsolescent military equipment in Alaska and at the Canadian-American base at Churchill on Hudson's Bay. But the decision, whether or not to make the essential investment for true defense of the Aretic frontier, has simply not been made.

A slightly different omission on an even larger scale, is the failure to adopt an Asiatic strategy. Here, there are two alternatives. We can content ourselves with the simple defense of the Pacific, holding such island outposts as Okinawa, and allowing the whole continent of Asia ultimately to come under Soviet domination. Or we can make the necessary investment to halt the Russian infiltration of Asia (already well-advanced in Burma, Indo-China and Indonesia, as well as in China proper) by restoring stability to China. The investment demanded by the second alternative will be very great indeed, since the situation in China has been permitted to deteriorate in an appalling manner. But the price of the first alternative will be acceptance of the inclusion in the Soviet sphere of a billion and a half additional human beings, more or less, plus all of Asia's incalculable resources.

UNTIL THE present, no clear choice has meen made, either by the Joint Chiefs of Staff or on a higher level, between these two alternatives. Now, when the situation in China is already desperate, it seems likely that the decision will be made to restore stability to China at all costs. Under the circumstances, it might have been better to face the facts of the national interest in Asia a year or two earlier.

Furthermore, it is not only on the rarefied level of high strategy that the effects of the division of the services have been felt since the war. In the field of research, trouble has been averated by working local unification in the form of the Joint Research and Development Board, toughly and wisely led by Dr. Vannevar Bush. But this expedient is temporary, and cannot long survive a failure to pass the unification bill. As for the equally crucial field of intelligence, little or no progress toward development of a truly efficient American intelligence net can be hoped for until the unification bill is on the statute books. The Central Intelligence Group is supposed to do the job, and considering that it has experienced three changes of director in the last year, the CIG has managed surprisingly well. But there will be no American intelligence worthy of the name until this orphaned agency acquires some sort of permanent, logical status.

The consequences of disunity are not immediately apparent; the effects are not felt at once. But the effects are nevertheless entirely foreseeable. And study of them leads to the conclusion that prompt passage of the unification bill will be one of the cheapest forms of national insurance which the United States can take out.

Freezing of Social Security Tax Wins Approval of Group

Legislation freezing the Social Security tax at the present 1 per cent on employes' pay and employers' payrolls was approved yesterday by a House Ways and Means Subcommittee.

Under present law the tax will rise to 2.5 per cent next January 1 unless Congress acts to prevent an increase.

Chairman Reed (R., N. Y.) said the subcommittee will propose that the levy be allowed to rise to 1.5 per cent against employer and employe in 1950, continue at that rate through 1956 and then rise to 2 per cent.

Over-Counter Issues Show Higher Slant

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington securities traded over-the-counter display an irregularly higher trend this year, a compilation by The Post showed last night.

Based on a comparison of bid prices yesterday with those at the end of 1946, 13 of 36 leading issues were higher. Nine were lower and 14 were unchanged.

The upward slant here was in contrast with a general slump in security prices nationally.

Some of the wider movers on the upside included Munsey Trust, up 5; American Company preferred, up 2½; City Bank, up 2; National Press Building common, up 4¾; Washington Sanitary Housing, up 2; Merchant Transfer & Storage, up 2 and Hamilton National Bank, up 1½.

The following bid quotations represent prices gathered by Washington members of the National Association of Securities Dealers. The latest bids were as of noon Tuesday.

New York Cotton

New York, June 3 (AP).—Cotton futures ended with gains of 70 cents to $2.10 a bale over the previous close in active dealings today.

The market was dominated by aggressive short covering in July, 1947, futures which showed the largest gains for the day, reflecting tightness in supplies of old crop cotton.

The Government weekly weather report noted cotton crop progress was slowed in most parts of the belt by cool weather, except in the South Atlantic States. This also induced buying in futures which met only scale up offerings by leading spot firms and light profit taking.

Stocks Rally On Pleasing Net Reports

New York, June 3 (AP).—Propped by some pleasing earnings statements and the exceptional slackness of offerings, leading stocks turned around in today's market and scored recoveries of fractions to 2 or more points.

There was some short covering and professional bidding on the idea selected issues may have been oversold and the list in technical shape for revival if the news warranted. Most brokerage clients, however, held aloof to await outcome of labor and tax legislation, light on the business picture and developments in foreign affairs.

Steels and motors did better in the forenoon although dealings were sluggish. Activity picked up a bit in the final hour with prices hardening in virtually all departments when Standard Oil (New Jersey) disclosed a sharp jump in net. This stock ended up 2⅜ at the year's top of 72. Extreme advances were shaded in a number of cases at the close.

Transfers of 690,000 shares compared with Monday's 520,000, the low for a full session since July 5.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was up .8 of a point at 61.3, more than wiping out yesterday's dip. It was the widest advance since last Wednesday which, in turn, was the broadest since February 7.

Allied Chemical added 3½ at 171. Plus signs of a point or so were retained by Santa Fe at 74½, Philip Morris 29, General Motors 55⅝, Chrysler 99¾, American Tobacco "B" 70, Woolworth 46, Montgomery Ward 53⅜, Goodrich 50⅞, Johns-Manville 38¾, Du Pont 177½ and Union Carbide 101.

The weak aviations of Monday came back fractionally. Ahead were Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Eastern Air Lines and United Air Lines.

Morgan Stanley Syndicate Offers A. T. & T. Issue

New York, June 3 (AP).—A syndicate headed by Morgan Stanley & Co. today was successful bidders for a new issue of 200 million dollars American Telephone & Telegraph Co. 40-year debentures, offering 102.2199 for a 2⅞ per cent interest rate.

Immediately upon being awarded the issue, the successful group reoffered the securities at 102⅞, to yield 2.756 per cent to maturity.

The interest cost to the company figured out at approximately 2.7828 per cent, compared with an interest cost of 2.737 per cent on the sale of the last big block of debentures last March.

Another syndicate headed by First Boston Corp. and Halsey, Stuart & Co. was second highest bidder on a joint bid of 102.13 for the same 2⅞ per cent coupon.

Quick public offering of the debentures was made possible through expedited clearance by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which approved the transaction within a matter of a few minutes after the bids were opened.

Proceeds from the latest financing will be used by the telephone company to provide funds for its huge expansion program as needed.

Power Firms Plan 4-Billion Outlay

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3 (AP). Grover C. Neff of Madison, Wis., president of the Edison Electric Institute, said today the electric power industry would spend four billion dollars within the next few years for construction of new plants.

Neff told the first general session of the fifteenth annual convention of the institute "we are part of an industry that has not yet fathomed the limits of its usefulness."

He called on personnel of electric service companies to "keep their relations with one another above the plane where governmental authority is impelled to step in to regulate relationships." He said strikes cutting off electric power were "the most upsetting."

"The average employe is now subject to many new influences and forces that tend to make him dissatisfied with his lot," Neff said. "This requires increased attention to personnel matters by management."

Martin Co. Gets Big RFC Loan

Chairman John D. Goodloe announced yesterday the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has approved a $16,600,000 loan to the Glenn L. Martin Co., Baltimore, Md.

The loan was made to meet "current needs" of the aircraft company and "will be used primarily for working capital in the production of the Martin 2-0-2 commercial plane," Goodloe said in a statement.

He added that consideration is being given to a company application for $8,400,000 of additional financing.

U. S. Lines Net Rises Sharply in First Half

Hoboken, N. J., June 3 (AP).—United States Lines earned about four million dollars in the first half of 1947 against $2,366,569 in the like period last year, John M. Franklin, president, said today at the annual stockholders' meeting.

Franklin said the America, the company's flagship, was booked solidly both ways for several months and the Washington, now being reconditioned, will be ready for transatlantic service about October 1.

Stockholders approved an increase in the authorized common stock to two million shares from 1,500,000 now outstanding.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—Grain futures advanced sharply at the Board of Trade today on news that the Commodity Credit Corporation had resumed buying of wheat. The advance was stimulated by adverse weather conditions.

At times wheat and corn advanced more than 5 cents, but a wave of profit cashing toward the close reduced prices from the day's best figures.

Buying was of a general character and for the greater part of the session selling was readily absorbed by persistent demand from mills and commission houses with Southwestern connections.

At the close wheat was 3 cents to 4½ cents higher than the previous finish; July, 2.29¾@2.40. Corn was 3⅛ to 4⅜ higher; July, 1.83⅜@1.83½. Oats were ⅜ to 2⅜ higher; July, 92⅜@92½.

Traders had private reports field conditions have been aggravated by last weekend's rains over a large section of the corn belt. The extended weather report indicated that more unwanted rain will fall over the corn belt as well as in the Southwest harvest section.

Chicago, June 3 (AP).—The board of governors of the Chicago Stock Exchange announced today the election of Homer P. Hargrave, general partner of the firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane, as chairman of the board.

N. J. Standard Net Estimated At 140 Million

Flemington, N. J., June 3 (AP).—Standard Oil Co. (N.J.) will have net earnings of approximately 140 million dollars, equal to $5.12 a share, in the first half of 1947, compared with 88 million dollars, or $3.22 a share, in the first half of 1946, Chairman F. W. Abrams told the annual stockholders' meeting today.

Total earnings for the year should be high enough, he said, "to permit us to continue to meet a large part of our capital needs through reinvestment.

"The major factor on our immediate business horizon," Abrams said, "is the great and growing demand for oil products everywhere. To the surprise of almost everyone, there has not been any significant drop—even temporary—in the demand for oil products since the cessation of war activities. As a matter of fact, it appears that consumption of oil products is increasing at a rate substantially greater than it was before the war."

President Eugene Holman told stockholders: "The whole oil industry is now producing crude oil and refining and distributing oil products at the maximum rate in its history."

"For the immediate future, however, it would be misleading not to make it plain that the supply of crude oil and products is tight.

"It is quite possible that over the next year there might be serious, but temporary, local shortages in the supply of some products.

"It should be remembered that the industry, however, is producing oil products at a greater rate than it has ever done before—nearly 25 per cent greater today than in the highest prewar year."

The Gallup Poll

Half of Americans Believe Huge Fortunes Still Possible

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 3.—Our traditional American dream that every man can become a millionaire—is it over and done with?

The American people aren't sure what the answer is—about half of them think it is quite possible for another man to climb from humble circumstances to the possession of a vast fortune like Ford's, while the other half seem to believe that such days are over in America and that nothing like it will ever be possible again.

To find out what the country thinks about the possibilities of producing gigantic new fortunes, the Institute had interviewers in all the 48 States ask this question of a cross-section of people in all walks of life:

Do you think it will ever be possible for another American to build up a fortune like Henry Ford?

The results:

Yes	49%
No	45
No opinion	6

People who have what might be called a "medium" amount of schooling—that is, who have attended high school but have not gone to college—are the most optimistic about the chances of giant millionaries being produced again. The college-trained people are less optimistic, and so are the people who have never gone beyond grade school. Present occupation also has an influence on the way a man feels about future millionaires.

To summarize it in a sentence, the most optimistic type in the country so far as this issue is concerned is a person in his twenties who has had a high school education but no more and who is a white collar worker. All this is shown in the following table giving results of the poll by age, occupation and type of education.

BY EDUCATION
College	47%	51%	2%
High School Grade or	55	40	5
No School	45	46	9
BY AGE
21-29	59	36	5
30-49	47	47	6
50 and over	45	48	7
BY OCCUPATION
White Collar	52	41	6
Manual Worker	50	44	6
Farm	49	44	7
Prof. and Bus.	44	53	3

One reason many people think new multimillionaires are possible is that they are not very well-informed about the amount of income tax which a man has to pay as he ascends the income ladder.

The median average of all guesses is that the man would pay 50 per cent of his million dollar income to Uncle Sam's income tax collectors.

Tax-weary millionaires who hear about this poll will undoubtedly make a wry face and sigh, "If that were only true!"

Actually at the time the poll was taken a man making a million dollars a year in personal income had to pay around 84 per cent of it to the Government.

Clark Asks Jury to Probe Car Shortage

Attorney General Clark said yesterday he has asked a grand jury here to investigate alleged violations of the antitrust laws in the railway freight car building industry.

Clark said in a statement that "certain corporations and individuals" are alleged to have engaged in restraints of trade and violations of the antitrust laws, but mentioned no names.

His announcement comes after an acute freight car shortage in the country for many months.

The Justice Department said that subpenas are being issued "for the production for a District of Columbia grand jury, of certain documents and records of the freight car building companies, railway and car building trade associations and others."

Result of Probe By FBI

"This action," Clark said, "is the result of investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of complaints that railway freight car building companies have entered into agreements with each other to fix noncompetitive prices for freight cars built by them for railroads and other purchasers, and have allocated prospective railway freight car manufacturing business among the various companies in the industry according to percentage quotas assigned to various members of the industry.

"From that investigation it appears that four freight car building companies have in recent years secured approximately 80 per cent of the freight car building business."

Congressional committees have conducted lengthy investigations of the shortage of freight cars.

The testimony of railroad officials was to the effect that it was due largely to wartime suspension of building of new cars, and the heavy strain the war placed on railroad rolling stock.

They said that since the war cars have been wearing out faster than they could be replaced.

Conferences Held Early In 1947

In view of the continuing car shortage, Government-industry conferences were held early this year in an effort to get production up to 10,000 new cars per month.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, told a news conference last week that the steel industry is more than making good on its promise to deliver sufficient steel to the car builders but that the output of cars is still lagging.

Johnson said that the railroads which currently have in orders for some 100,000 new freight cars would probably get April deliveries of about 4,000 cars.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Minutemen' Planned For U. S. Industry

By Drew Pearson

ONE OF THE MOST secret meetings since war days was held behind tightly barred doors in Washington's vast Pentagon Building last week.

Patterson

The meeting was called for the purpose of mobilizing American industry against the possibility of another war. Plans were laid in detail for the establishment of an industry reserve corps of American workers and employers in major American industries.

Purpose of the reserve corps would be to prepare industry for rapid conversion to wartime production in an emergency. Special training courses for employers and employes will be worked out if the plan finally is approved. The industrial corps would have units in every major manufacturing plant in the Nation.

However, the recruitment of these industrial "minutemen" would be entirely voluntary.

The secret Pentagon meeting, called by Secretary of War Patterson, was attended by a number of prominent industrialists and labor leaders, including representatives of the Edison Electric Co., the National Association of Manufacturers, American Federation of Labor, CIO, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the railway labor brotherhoods, the Association of American Railroads, Radio Corporation of America, the aircraft industry, the Petroleum Institute and others.

All those present were pledged to secrecy.

However, it can be revealed that Secretary of War Patterson and General Eisenhower issued a grim reminder regarding the dangers of another war—if it should come.

What Patterson and Eisenhower told the leaders was that while we had from 12 to 18 months to prepare for the last war before we were attacked, we wouldn't have one hour to prepare for an attack in the present atomic age.

The military chief warned that if the United States ever became involved in another war, the enemy would strike without a moment's notice and that, because of this, American productive machinery must be prepared for any eventuality.

Bilbo's Jaw

SENATOR THEODORE BILBO of Mississippi is reentering Ochsners Foundation Hospital for another and probably final operation on his jaw.

A piece of bone taken from his hip will be grafted into Bilbo's jawbone. The Mississippi Senator will then have to remain in the hospital from two to four weeks, which means he won't return to Washington before the adjournment of Congress in July.

Thus the question of unseating him will be deferred until the next congressional session in January. Meantime, Bilbo will continue to draw his $15,000 a year ($12,500 salary; $2500 expenses) just as every other member of the Senate, even though he never has taken the oath of office.

Dangerous Government Jobs

ONE PROBLEM faced by J. Edgar Hoover in keeping the FBI efficient is the relatively low salaries paid to G-men and the raids on the FBI made by private industry. Various corporations constantly are enticing some of Hoover's ablest operators away from him.

To counteract this, legislation has been introduced in Congress liberalizing pensions for G-men. Whereas most Civil Service employes can retire on pension only after reaching 62, it is proposed that because of the dangerous nature of their work, G-men be permitted to retire at the age of 50 if they have served for 20 years.

The bill came up for discussion in a closed-door meeting of the House Civil Service Committee recently, where Representative George Miller, Democrat of Alameda, Calif, said he was in sympathy with the bill, but added:

"FBI agents aren't the only Federal employes with hazardous jobs. You know some of the stories about the border patrols of customs people. Some of the agents of the Fish and Wildlife Service are also exposed to disease and danger. There's plenty of hazard to some of the work done by Fish and Wildlife agents in the snake-infested, malaria-ridden swamps in Florida and Louisiana.

"Then you've got the Secret Service and the revenue agents and lots of others. Many of them risk their lives just as much as the G-men."

Freshman Republican Thurston Ballard Morton of Kentucky supported Miller.

"In my country, up in the hills," he said, "there are plenty of spots where they just shoot on sight when they see a suspicious stranger. After they shoot they ask the stranger if he was a revenue man—if he can still talk. First they shoot, then they apologize."

Miller then asked a representative of the Civil Service Commission's retirement division what type of Government employe suffered greatest hardship. Committee members were astonished at his reply.

"Statistics of our division show that postal employes apply more often than any other group of employes for retirement benefits," he said. "And it's mainly the carriers, who get all sorts of disabilities from the nature of their jobs. They have to be out tramping with heavy loads through all sorts of weather. Rheumatism would be a comparatively mild ailment for some of them."

The committee approved the measure to liberalize the retirement regulations for G-men, but it is now expected that similar benefits will be voted for other Government employes.

Straight (?) Man To a Rabbit

Jimmy Stewart's Going To Be 'Harvey's' Chum While Frank Fay Rests

By Richard L. Coe

JIMMY STEWART is to play Elwood P. Dowd, "Harvey's" pal, this summer in New York.

"Harvey's" producer, Brock Pemberton, was in town yesterday on another piece of business—that 20 per cent legitimate theater tax—but his casting coup in getting the screen star for his long-run comedy hit is too good a piece of news to delay further.

Jimmy Stewart

For the likable Jimmy to be playing the shy friend of the invisible 6-foot white rabbit is the year's most inspired casting. The very thought of it has us saving cigarette money for a jaunt to New York.

The screen star will take over the role while its creator, Frank Fay, is on a six-week vacation. He'll begin either July 14 or 21, and if you're smart you'll get your mail orders in right now to New York's 48th Street Theater. We've an idea there won't be an empty seat for the length of Jimmy's stay. And there's no room for standees in the 920-seat house.

Elwood always has fascinated screen stars. Joe E. Brown has just interrupted his Chicago run for a summer spell of movie-making. Bert Wheeler took over from Fay last summer vacation.

Harold Lloyd has always wanted to play it. Pemberton told us yesterday that Lloyd several times has been on the verge of saying yes, but has always veered off when it came down to actually doing it.

"Stewart," Brock tells you, "saw the play for the first time a little over two weeks ago. He was so enthusiastic about it between the acts, I asked him if he'd like to play it. 'Why I sure would,' said Jimmy. 'Do you think I could really do it in New York?'"

Then the former AAF colonel said he'd think it over and let him know. "I'll get in touch with you," he told Brock.

"Well, er, uhm," replied Brock, knowing a good thing, "you'd better let me know where you're staying in case you forget to call me."

Jimmy's a Stage Veteran

Though he didn't quite believe his good fortune at the time, Brock smiles that Stewart is a man who knows his own mind. Jimmy had to skip out to the coast to clear up retakes and picture schedules, but the agreement was concluded over the weekend.

So mum did Pemberton keep over his coup, that Broadway and the players at the 48th Street were stunned when the news broke just before the curtain rose Monday night. Josephine Hull, who plays Elwood's baffled sister, is now on a two-month holiday but we've an idea she'll be back for at least a part of Stewart's Elwood.

The stage is home to Stewart. At Princeton he was in both Triangle Club and Theater Intime productions. In one of the Intime shows he met Margaret Sullavan, who had been loaned to the student group by Pemberton from one of his touring companies of "Strictly Dishonorable." After summer stock at Falmouth, he went on to New York in "Page Miss Glory," "Yellow Jack," "Spring in Autumn" and "Goodbye Again." His last New York stage appearance was in 1935's "A Journey by Night."

And it was Miss Sullavan who first interested Hollywood in the chap who was to become one of its brightest stars. He made his debut with her in "Next Time We Love." His latest film, "Magic Town," is due for release this summer.

The thorny matter of "Harvey" finances has hardly come up, Brock informed us yesterday. Jimmy wants to play the part, Brock wants him to and that's that. (Of course, he's not doing it for free!)

Committee Hearing

Finances, however, are what brought Pemberton to Washington. He testified yesterday morning before the House Ways and Means Committee to urge that the 20 per cent tax on legitimate theater tickets be reduced to the prewar 10 per cent. That prewar 10 per cent, by the way, originated as a luxury tax of World War I, but it's still in force as an admission tax, the only industry so penalized.

Pemberton told the committee that to cut back to the 10 per cent figure would scarcely make a dent in the national income. At the most liberal estimate, he said, the tax revenue from the source would be reduced by about five million dollars, which if not imposed could conceivably be met by the income tax on the earnings of those who would receive additional employment thereby.

"If we are indeed a luxury business," Pemberton said, "we should proceed to act like one. Federal, State and municipal governments, as well as large charitable organizations such as the Red Cross, Infantile Paralysis and Cancer societies have for years regarded us as quasipublic institutions, using us to stimulate their drives. If we are to be taxed out of existence, we will have to begin to protect ourselves, to sell the things we now give freely."

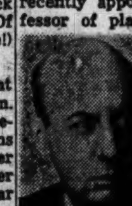

Other speakers for the theater before the committee yesterday included James F. Reilly, executive director of the National Association of the Legitimate Theater; Ilka Chase, representing actors; Thomas Murtha of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, and Marc Connelly, speaking for the Dramatists Guild. Connelly's remarks appear in the story at the right.

LOOK AWFUL, DON'T THEY, GIRLS? But Alice Faye and Ethel Merman are dressed in the height of 1938 fashion, which is when they did this scene for "Alexander's Ragtime Band," the Irving Berlin musical returning to the Columbia screen Thursday. Tyrone Power, Don Ameche and Jack Haley are among the players. So is John Carradine, who's headed out Olney Theater way soon for "A Bill of Divorcement"

Marc Connelly Says Culture Is Civilization—Plus 20% Tax

Winner of the Pulitzer Prize for "The Green Pastures" and recently appointed associate professor of playwrighting at Yale, Marc Connelly yesterday defined "culture" before the Ways and Means Committee of the House.

Marc Connelly

Connelly said:

"There are people who, when they hear the word 'culture' grow a little self-conscious. Some of them smile tolerantly and others feel vaguely uncomfortable. Not that they mind culture itself so much. It's what culture implies.

"To them culture really means temperamental, irresponsible individuals, perhaps harmless in themselves, but a little foolish in their extravagent concern for 'art' and all those other silly activities that must be tolerated by levelheaded citizens who occasionally find diversion or entertainment in their activities.

"That isn't the definition of culture by thousands of men and women who work in the theater and find pride and self-respect in what they contribute to their fellow citizens.

Back to The Cave:

"To them culture and civilization are interchangeable words. They think of culture as the means by which man becomes civilized. It is the gauge of his growth and the richness he acquires by growing.

"When we talk of the culture of a nation no one ever laughs. We know then we are talking about something the absence of which would send civilization back to the cave.

"The men and women of the theater know that millions of soldiers and sailors and people on the home front appreciate what they did to hearten them during the war.

"The Government of our country recognized that the people of the theater were vitally necessary in winning the war and in making life endurable in those nightmare years.

Accepted as War Expediency

"I am speaking for the men and women whose theatrical writing is part of our country's heritage. Many of them were too busy with war work when the 20 per cent tax was applied to the theater to know it was being done. Those who did know took it like good citizens as a wartime expediency.

"Now they are back in a peacetime world trying against constantly growing odds to make their livelihoods again. Some of them, as former GI's have been given governmental encouragement and aid to become more efficient in facing the future. They can go to school and learn how to become better craftsmen.

"But what good is their increased proficiency going to be in a theater—as always, the first industry to feel the pinch of economic readjustment—which now faces the further handicap of continuance of a war-time burden?

Not Long-Haired Fools

"The men and women who provide America with its plays and operas, musical comedies and ballets are not long-haired dreamy fools. They are intelligent citizens contributing to a civilization and a national economy just as responsibly as the man trying to turn out motor cars or building materials.

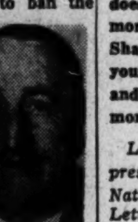

"American playwrights and composers want to know why the theater should be victimized by taxes that are unjust and cruel and threaten to become so unbearable that they can easily destroy an institution that should be honored and protected.

"If the American theater seems only a pipsqueak thing unworthy of the consideration other taxpaying institutions receive, then maybe the people of the theater are wrong in what they think the word culture means."

Vienna Doesn't Enjoy Spike's 'Blue Danube'

New York—The United States Army's Blue Danube network in Austria has been asked by the Austrian government to ban the Spike Jones recording of "Blue Danube." The government's official feeling was that the recording is irreverent . . . Kermit Bloomgarten will produce the Dorothy Parker-Ross Evans play. Time magazine anticipates a Chicago boycott on Thursday, when its next issue shows Colonel Robert R. McCormick as the subject of its cover-story . . . P. G. Wodehouse plans to remain here indefinitely. He now is working on a dramatization of his "Mr. Psmith" stories, and hopes to have a Broadway production ready in the fall . . . The Austrian National Bank, in an unprecedented move recognizing films and movie talent as important exports, is backing the American visit of screen star Ilka Windisch. Miss Windisch, who is 22, is beng sent here for several months so that she can learn English as it is spoken here. The bank expects that this knowledge will make her future films acceptable for import by America.

J. Arthur Rank

J. Arthur Rank, Britain's No. 1 movie man, is in Hollywood now after an inspection and good-will tour of this country and Canada. His press campaign has been a remarkable one and Mr. Rank's ready answers averted incidents which might have been disturbing . . . Only once in his short movie career was he bewildered at a first meeting. It happened when he was introduced to G. B. Shaw, who greeted him: "Are you a poor man?" Rank, whose wealth is fabulous, said: "What difference does it make?" . . . "I like taking money from the rich," replied Shaw. "If you're rich, fine. If you're poor and honest, join us and we'll find a rich man whose money we'll take."

Last week Walter Damrosch presented the Gold Medal of the National Institute of Arts and Letters to John Alden Carpenter. In making the presentation, Damrosch listed the achievements of the noted composer. "Yours has been a great and distinguished career," began Damrosch—who then whispered to the recipient: "How old are you?" . . . "Seventy-one," replied Carpenter. . . . "A great and distinguished career," continued the 85-year-old Damrosch, "especially for one who still is so young . . ."

Henry Morgan's agent started to show him the newest Hooper ratings. "I know mine has gone up," said Morgan. His agent asked if he already had seen the ratings. "Not yet, but I know it's gone up," explained the apartment-hunting Morgan. "Last month I got letters offering me $600-a-month apartments. Now they're offering me $750-a-month apartments" . . . Adolf A. Berle, jr., has been elected to the national board of the Interstate Rescue and Relief Commission . . . John Howard, the tennis player who tried to vindicate his wife, Diana Barrymore, after their encounter with Kentucky peace officers, is a poor judge of her performances. When Miss Barrymore opened on Broadway last in "Hidden Horizons," Howard was so dazzled by her acting that he bet the play would win the Pulitzer Prize. It closed in less than a week.

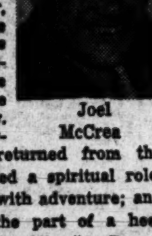

The American Federation of Labor's current newspaper advertising campaign hit two snags this month. The N. Y. Herald Tribune refused to accept the advertisement in which it used the line: "And the NAM is their mouthpiece." The Herald Tribune offered to accept the ad if "mouthpiece"—which it deemed libelous—would be changed to "spokesman." The A. F. of L. refused to make the change . . . The Christian Science Monitor also refused an ad—the one which began: "Don't Be a NAM Fool." The pun, ruled the editors, bordered on profanity.

The United States Attorney's office had a writ of mandamus ready from the Circuit Court of Appeals, to halt any action by Federal Judge J. F. T. O'Connor in the Serge Rubinstein deportation matter. Judge O'Connor presided at the Rubinstein draft evasion trial, and decided that he had no jurisdiction to interfere in the deportation case

New 'Second Honeymoon' May Soon Come Tyrone's Way

Hollywood. — Remember the Bret Harte story, "Tennessee's Partner?" It'll be Joel McCrea's next picture. On it Harry Sherman will step aside as producer and give that spot to his future son-in-law, Vernon Clark. However, Harry will serve as an executive on the production; but in the future he'll take things easier. . . . Since Tyrone Power returned from the war, he's played a spiritual role, another filled with adventure; and now he has the part of a heel in "Nightmare Alley." Darryl Zanuck has promised him a comedy for his next picture. If a better one can't be found, Twentieth may remake "Second Honeymoon," in which Ty played 10 years ago. . . . Glenda Farrell is wanted by Arthur Hopkins for a revival of "Good Gracious Annabelle" in summer stock. If it clicks, Arthur will take the play to Broadway this winter. It's a charming comedy.

Joel McCrea

Double Featured

"Command Decision," which will star Clark Gable on the screen, is also getting a stage treatment. It'll be ready for Broadway in September. MacDonald Carey was wanted for the starring role in the play, but had to turn it down, because he starts "Sainted Sisters" for Paramount the same month. . . . Joan Caufield won't be in "The Night Has a Thousand Eyes" as reported; but John Lund will. The feminine lead in the picture hasn't yet been set. Joan's moved into a new home; her father bought her a new car, and she'll take her mother to Mexico for a brief vacation. . . . What's this? I hear that Mike Curtiz is looking for a "spiritual but primitive Mexican girl to play the lead in "Serenade." What goes? I thought Ann Sheridan had been set for that part ages ago. . . . Barbara Stanwyck traveled over a large section of Europe in behalf of "The Other Love" and made appearances in New York to plug the film there. But she saw the picture for the first time night before last in Hollywood.

Set Skipping

Doug Fairbanks, jr., is a canny businessman. He's got C. E. Erickson, who managed his father for 20 years, doing the same thing for him. Doug's enthusiastic over Max Ophuls, who's directing him in "The Exile." After watching a scene rehearsed, I could understand the star's attitude. Ophuls is a hound for detail . . . As I was leaving the set Doug said, "Take a look at our tulips on the next sound stage." I did. It was a magnificent set. There where an inn had been built and dismantled for a scene the day before was an enormous field of blooming tulips; bordered on one side by a row of blossom-filled trees, and on the other by a canal with a huge sailboat upon it. Beyond it was a road big enough to accommodate an oxcart. Jimmy Savo's book, "Little World, Hello," hits the stands in September. There's a great little actor. I never have understood why there wasn't a place for him on the screen.

Water Babies

Jimmy Durante joins the cast of "Neptune's Daughters." No, he won't be Neptune, as Lauritz Melchior already has the part. It could be that the latter will sing "Asleep in the Deep" while rising from the waves . . . After Cornel Wilde complained about having to wear costumes throughout all of his recent pictures, Don Hartman wrote in a sequence for "It Had to Be You" that'll allow the star to be done up in soup and fish . . . Jean Sablon will sing the old Maurice Chevalier tunes in "Words and Music" when Metro makes the picture . . . George Stevens is bringing out Edith Evanson from New York to play a role in "I Remember Mama." She worked for George in "Woman of the Year."

House Group Exempts Fairs From Gate Tax

By The Associated Press

Legislation exempting agricultural fairs from the 20 per cent excise tax on general admissions was approved yesterday by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Congress was asked to exempt fairs on the ground that they are "basically education."

Broadway Begs Admission Tax Cut

By the United Press

Yesterday was Broadway's day before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Four representatives of the legitimate theater from New York appeared before the committee to ask reduction or elimination of the 20 per cent admission tax. The committee is making a comprehensive tax study.

Ilka Chase, representing the Actors Equity Association, told the committee that the theater and its workers were officially recognized as necessary during the war. She said the theater is just as necessary in peacetime.

"But we can be of value only if we can continue to exist," Miss Chase said. "That is what we want, and all we want—a chance to exist."

Big 5 Delegates Fail to Agree On Plan for U. N. Arms Group

Lake Success, June 3 (AP).—Chief delegates of the five great powers failed to agree tonight on a work plan for the United Nations Commission for Conventional Armaments and virtually abandoned the attempt.

As the delegates adjourned a four-hour closed meeting, they instructed the U. N. secretariat to prepare a report to the full commission that they were not able to draw up a schedule for it to follow. This will be considered Friday.

One of the major factors in the disagreement, it was said, was an attempt by Soviet Russia's Andrei A. Gromyko to link the problem of atomic energy control with the task of the Arms Commission, which has been ordered to draw up recommendations for reducing armaments and armed forces.

Earlier, Russia served notice on the U. N. atomic delegates that they must decide sooner or later on a Soviet demand for a convention outlawing atomic weapons.

The working committee of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission passed over that issue with brief debate in a closed session this morning when it became evident that the United States, France and China, among the great powers, did not want to talk about it at present.

Confronted with opposition from Australia, Brazil, Belgium, Britain and Canada, Gromyko agreed for the working committee to drop the subject temporarily but warned that a decision would have to come before the whole atomic control issue is settled.

THE MINISTER'S BOYS ARE BACK. Those Minnesota farm boys, Stan and Winston Nelson, with engaging Jean Montrose, are back at the Blue Mirror after six months in Florida. Stan and Winston are the surprising sons of a Lutheran minister, and being from Minnesota, they're naturally Minnesota U. grads and Swedish. Winston is the "white-headed boy," meaning that his hair is so fair it looks pure white ((see pic.) . . . It's hard to analyze the undeniable superiority of this trio. They play classics with great elan, but they're also at home in all the pop music, like nothing better than a roaring round of hot rhythm. Their special quality seems to be a certain taste and finesse, combined with high spirits, that informs all of their work.

Winston Nelson At the Blue Mirror

Saucer big were the eyes of 7-year-old Rosalie Costello, dining in the Rainbow Room, when Jimmy Nichols' Band started to sing and play "Rosalie." The song was really for her. Rosalie was so embarrassed!

THE GREAT OUTDOORS will be the scene of plenty of dining and dancing for the rest of the summer. The Starlight Roof, atop the Roger Smith Hotel, will open on Friday with Sammy Seymour's band. The huge Shoreham Terrace is already ablaze with lights and Barnee's music. Quonset Inn is installing a terrace overlooking the hillside on which the spot is perched. (Sammy Ferro's playing at Quonset preliminary to his opening at the Neptune Room on June 21.)

SUMMER CRUSHES. Denny Calvert, affable maitre d'hotel of Hotel 2400 Sixteenth st., needed a traffic manager the other night. People attending the parties of Georgetown Medical School, the University of Michigan, the Litho Club and the Hungarian Legation were trooping through the lobby like an army—and most of 'em also trying to grab a pre-party or after-party cocktail in the Lounge Riviera . . . The New Athens has a picnic with its party schedule, too. Government, fraternity, athletic and veterans' groups meet regularly at the New Athens, usually in the downstairs dining room where speechifying and toast-proposing are in order.

The Balalaika has closed its doors for the summer, will reopen on September 4 with a new revue and a troupe well-browned after a three months' vacation.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ONE OF THE SAD sights of this baseball season is the spectacle offered up by Mickey Vernon, batting champion of the American League last year, who is groping for hits like the veriest busher and acting as if he never saw big league pitching before. Almost completely disenchanted are the Mickey Vernon fans who envisaged another batting crown for the lengthy Washington first baseman.

POVICH

Like every hitter in a slump, Vernon is chasing bad balls, taking called strikes, fiddling with his stance and grip, and getting an inordinate number of line drives caught when he does meet the ball well. It has added up to a meager .254 batting average for Vernon, 100 points below the figure he amassed last year, and messing up the productiveness of the supposedly fat part of the Nats' batting order.

With Vernon, it's been going on ever since the season started. He didn't hit at the outset of last season, either, but his 1946 slump endured for only two weeks. His current slump is in its seventh week with no evidence that he will shake it. More significant is the fact that the league's pitchers are now regarding him as a soft touch, a state of confidence that induces the hitter's jitters.

THAT'S WHAT Vernon is this year, a jittery hitter. On his mind unquestionably is the salary jump from $9000 to $20,000 a year that he got for pounding out his league-leading .353 average last season. He knows baseball salaries can come down as quickly as they go up, and he is acting for all the world like a guy who is swinging against a salary cut instead of a baseball. Weighing heavily on him, too, must be the comment of the skeptics who pointed out that he never was a .300 hitter in his life until last year.

However, Vernon was a great hitter last year. He hit the ball well, to all fields, legged out many a hit when he had to, beat out bunts, and teed off for extra bases all season. He was dangerous any time he stepped to the plate, with that classic level swing, and a confident manner. There's been a seepage somewhere. This year, Vernon is without poise and without confidence. A long slump gets you down that way.

In the National League, there is the perfect counterpart of Vernon. Stan Musial of the Cards, who led his league in hitting last season, can scarcely get up a gallup at bat this year. Musial, like Vernon, is a worrier, very unhappy when he doesn't get his base hits. Like Vernon, Musial is battling against a salary cut.

VERNON IS A NATURAL pull hitter who had great success last season hitting to left and left center, but it is the opinion of Clark Griffith that a slump such as Vernon's can be cured only by taking his best cut and staying with it until the hits bring back his confidence.

"He's got to forget about trying to place his hits like he was doing last year to get that big batting average," said Griffith. "A fellow in the kind of a slump he's in, ought to be glad to meet the ball instead of trying to be cute about where he hits it. Vernon can be a .300 hitter if he'll lay back and try to knock everything into right field. That's when he takes his best cut. There's time enough for him to try to place his hits after he starts impressing some of the pitchers that he's a dangerous hitter again."

Unlike Ted Williams, Vernon is faced with no special shift against him to reduce the vulnerable territory in right field, but according to Griffith he isn't taking advantage of his best natural stroke. "He doesn't have to hit .353 for us," said the Nats' owner. "If he just stands up there and takes his best cut he'll be a valuable man to the club."

AS IN THE CASE of all guys in a batting slump, Vernon has been unlucky, too. Last week in Griffith Stadium against the Yankees, he lashed a wicked line drive into left field near the foul line, only to have it caught by Charlie Keller who was playing yards out of position and found himself in the right spot to rob Vernon of an extra base hit.

In his time, every good hitter has experienced his helplessness in a batting slump. During a couple of stretches this season, Bobby Doerr went hitless in 19 consecutive times at bat, and a bit later he went to the plate 25 times without a hit. Rare is the hitter who is philosophical about it. The cause is as mysterious as the cure is elusive.

Just before the war, Buddy Lewis was having a horrible time of it trying to get a hit in the first three weeks of the season. He had batted .320 the year before and was one of the good hitters of the league, but couldn't buy a hit starting the next season. "I'm not comfortable up there at the plate," he moaned. "Believe it or not, but I've forgotten where I used to put my feet last season."

Yanks Beat Newhouser; DiMaggio Gets 4 Hits

Detroit, June 3 (AP).—Frank Shea, 24-year-old rookie whiz, pitched the New York Yankees within two games of the American League lead today by shutting out the first-place Detroit Tigers for the second straight time, 3 to 0.

Shea, who blanked the league-leaders with four hits May 21 in New York, gave them just five today to fashion his sixth straight victory, again at the expense of Detroit's ace, Hal Newhouser, who stayed seven innings and gave up six of New York's eight safeties.

Joltin' Joe DiMaggio reeled off four straight hits off Newhouser to take the American League batting leadership away from bounced into a ninth inning double teammate George McQuinn but play off Reliefman Hal White to end a string of seven hits in seven times at bat. DiMaggio has now hit safely in 16 straight games.

DiMaggio's four hits in five times at bat raised his average 16 points to .368 while McQuinn had one safety in four times up and dropped to .350.

Jones Knocks Hanbury Out In 2d Round

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Herbie (Biff) Jones passed his lightweight contendership examination with flying colors, polishing off Lew Hanbury in two rounds at Griffith Stadium last night.

Making his first start as a lightweight, Jones dropped Hanbury four times in the opening session and then put him away for good in the second, the end coming 51 seconds after the round began.

There were only 1701 paying spectators at the ball park for the attraction, but the sparse gathering saw an aroused Biffer leap out of his corner, lunge at Hanbury from the start and stay on top of him until Referee Charlie Reynolds began the last count in the second.

The southpawing Herbie, scaling 131½ against Lew's 135½, pitched four straight stiff lefts to Hanbury's mouth and floored Lew with each punch in the first round. The first three times, Lew stayed down for nine, but the bell saved him near the end when Referee Reynolds' count had reached four.

Going for the kill, the Biffer charged out of his corner for the second, snorted twice and then fired another left. It landed on Hanbury's jaw and Lew was down again—this time for good.

Hanbury landed only one punch—a short right which caught Jones on the chin after the first knockdown in the opening heat. It shook up Jones for a second, but Herbie bounced right back to the attack.

It was a rousing finish to an otherwise dull card which grossed only $4125.65.

Jimmy Carter, New York featherweight, provided a mild surprise in the cofeatured semiwindup when he boxed Sandy Saddler, the highly touted New Yorker, to a draw in 10.

Carter forced the fighting most of the way while Saddler, rated the No. 2 contender for Willie Pep's crown, flashed real class in only the ninth round when he staggered Carter with three volleys to the head.

Carter, 2½ pounds heavier than Saddler at 132½, proved a tough cookie and didn't retreat once. For this—and solely because of this—Judges Harry Volkman and C. U. Trigg voted for a draw, while Referee Charlie Reynolds cast his ballot for Saddler.

Sonny Boy West, local featherweight, wasn't too impressive in carving out a six-round verdict over Mickey Garcia, New York. West weighed 133½, Garcia, 131½.

In the opener, Billy Yates flattened Red Jeter in the first heat. Yates knocked Jeter through the ropes and the redhead failed to return within the required 10 seconds. Bill Unce, Washington lightweight, decisioned Maurice Nelson, Baltimore in a four.

Snead Has 68 at Prince Georges; Pros Jump on Locke Bandwagon

Sarazen Favors Bobby for Open

New York, June 3.—Gene Sarazen, winner of the United States Open Golf title in 1922 and 1932, wouldn't be a bit surprised if Bobby Locke of South Africa, ended the 27-year reign of American linksmen in the 1947 open championships at St. Louis next week.

The ruddy-faced visitor, who has averaged 69.88 strokes per round in the six tournaments since arriving in the United States and who is favored in Washington's Capital Open, is the best golfing importation since Harry Vardon, Sarazen insisted today. Vardon competed in the 1930 open, the year it went to Ted Ray of Great Britain, in a playoff with Francis Ouimet.

And Sarazen isn't alone in some phases of his predictions. Jimmy Demaret, who with Locke and Ben Hogan likely will start as favorites in the Open, declares the former Royal Air Force flier is "straight from tee to green"

Despite his relaxed attitude on the links, Locke usually winds up spectacularly. He won the Carolina by being 14 strokes below par. He triumphed in the $15,000 Philadelphia Inquirer meet two weeks ago by making up 10 strokes on Hogan on the final day while playing in rain, mist and wind.

Last week in the Goodall at Boston he trailed Vic Ghezzi of Kansas City by three points at the start of the final round—but won by four.

It is finishes such as those that have netted him approximately $8250 of United States coin in eight weeks.

How to Get to Golf Tourney

From downtown, take New York ave. to Bladensburg rd., turn left to Peace Cross. Take Defense hwy. toward Annapolis for one-half mile, take right fork on Landover rd. to club about three miles. It is less than 10 miles from the White House.

From Bethesda, Silver Spring, etc., take East-West hwy. to College Park, turn right to Peace Cross. From southeast, take Bladensburg rd. to Peace Cross. Bus service is to Cheverly from Mount Rainier, with special-rate cabs available at Cheverly.

Slammer Clips Four Off Par

Bobby Locke may be the man to beat in the $10,000 Capital Open starting tomorrow at Prince Georges, but there's a sneaking hunch among the galleryites that the benickered South African will have to be at his level best to outstrike Sammy Snead.

The Hot Springs, Va., slammer, a disappointment in most of the tournaments following his return from South Africa where Locke thrashed him in a long series of exhibitions, swished around the county layout in a neat 68, 4 strokes under par, in a practice round yesterday.

Monday a week ago the Slammer stopped off here en route to the Goodall Tournament and burned up the course with a sizzling 66, equalling the course mark.

Payton Has 69

Snead was the most prominent of the early birds who practiced at Prince Georges yesterday, but his 68 was only one stroke better than the fine 69 young George Payton, Virginia Open champion, shot. Close on his heels was Tommy Wright, Knoxville, Tenn., shotmaker, with a two-under-par 70.

Snead could have easily had a 66 or better. He was down the middle on 17 of the fairways, straying only on the fifteenth, where he recovered nicely from the woods to get his par four.

Clinic Today

The actual firing in the 72-hole test doesn't begin until tomorrow when the 115-man field begins play at 8:30. Today, however, a dozen of the elite—Locke, Snead, Demarest, Mangrum, Vines & Co., participate in a special clinic at 4:30.

Holders of season tickets can view the clinic by merely showing their badges. Other spectators will be charged $1.75 for the privilege.

For the Kids

New Orleans Sets Example

IMPRESSIONS brought back from New Orleans where sports writers and broadcasters made further plans in a two-day meeting to do something for the kids of the country—

New Orleans is setting an example for other cities to follow by revamping on a greatly expanded scale its program of sports and recreation.

As a direct result of sessions held in the Department of Justice here last December and January, New Orleans has reorganized its entire recreation department. It will spend about 10 times more money this year than ever before with more than 200 fulltime, well-paid employes.

This reorganization incorporates other clubs and organizations engaged in this type of endeavor. At the head of it is Lester Lautenschlaeger, former Tulane football star, and a $1-a-year man in behalf of the kids.

Lautenschlaeger is a young man, in his early forties, and one of the beauties of the New Orleans set-up is that other prominent men young enough to have growing children have become personally interested in this program.

Mayor "Cheps" Morrison, under 40, is one of the most enthusiastic of all. Another is Charley Hurth, president of the Southern Association, a youngster himself among baseball executives.

Sam Corenswet, president of the executive committee of the New Orleans Midwinter Sports Association, which stages the whopping Sugar Bowl carnival, teams up with Lautenschlaeger, Morrison and Hurth.

With the youth, energy and experience of these men at the top, New Orleans' kids' program is the most sensational movement that has hit this quaint old Southern city in years.

FOOTBALLER-BASEBALLER Charlie Trippi is hitting .356 for Atlanta in the Southern Association, but such veteran Southern sports writers as Bill Keefe, New Orleans Times-Picayune, and Ed Danforth, Atlanta Journal, doubt if Charlie will develop into a baseball big leaguer.

Bobo Goes Route; Lewis, Spence Hit For Circuit

By Al Costello
Post Reporter

Cleveland, June 3.—Gerry Priddy broke up a give-and-take game here tonight by smashing out a home run in the ninth inning, giving the Washington Nats a 6-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Priddy's wallop was a thing of beauty, especially to Bobo Newsom, who weathered many a stormy inning to go the distance for the Nats in posting his second win against three defeats.

Priddy's clout was his first this season for the circuit. It came with two men out and was hit off Relief Hurler Les Willis before 20,968 shivering fans.

Priddy's homer was the third of the night for the suddenly slugging Nats. Previously, Stan Spence whacked his sixth of the season and Buddy Lewis connected for his second. Both came in the fifth when the Nats finished off starter Red Embree.

Start of the game was delayed more than 20 minutes by pre-game entertainment.

The Nats got to Embree for a single run in the second. Vernon singled to center and went to third when Spence singled to the same sector. Priddy's long fly to Seerey let Vernon come home.

The Indians evened it up in their half when Boudreau doubled down the third base line and registered on Gordon's line single to left.

The Nats made it 2-1 in the third when Newsom led off with a single to center, took second on a wild pitch, and completed the journey when Lewis lined a double to right. Grace and Vernon couldn't bring Buddy home.

The Indians came right back to go into the lead with two runs and would have another but for a brilliant stop and peg by Yost. With two out, Keltner singled to left and so did Metkovich, his second straight safety. The inning looked over when Boudreau popped a high fly to short left but Grace was playing back and the ball dropped in for a single, scoring Keltner and Metkovich, the latter registering all the way from first with a burst of speed. Boudreau, meanwhile, went to second on the throw to the plate.

Big Inning for Nats

The Nats unlimbered the home run artillery to tally three runs and take a 5-3 lead in the fifth. Lewis, first up, socked his second homer of the season over the right-field barrier to tie the score.

Grace tripled to right center and rode home when Spence walloped his sixth circuit blast of the year, a clout that cleared the synthetic fence at the 365-foot mark and dropped at the base of the permanent stands in deep right center, after a flight of some 420 feet.

The Indians deadlocked things in the seventh with two tallies. Dale Mitchell, Texas League batting champ, recently recalled by the Tribe, batted for Ed Klieman, who had relieved Embree, and beat out a hit to Priddy. Newsom immediately wild pitched him to second and proceeded to put the typing run on base by walking Peck.

Keltner sacrificed 'em along. Newsom fanned Metkovich. But Boudreau drilled a line single to left to get home the runs that knotted things.

Mickey Haefner, bothered with a badly abcessed ear since early in the season, did not even put on a uniform tonight, on orders of Doc Lentz, team trainer, who didn't want Mickey out in the damp and cold weather . . . Bill Veeck, Cleveland club owner, who still puts on his huge fireworks display at all night games, has added aerial acrobats to the pre-game entertainment program. They perform on a special trapeze high above the center-field bleachers . . .

New York, June 3 (AP).—The New York Giants took over undisputed possession of first place in the torrid National League pennant race by defeating the Chicago Cubs, 8-3, tonight. The victory gave the Giants a full-game lead over the Cubs who dropped into second place only 3 percentage points ahead of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Barney Wins Two for Bums

Brooklyn, June 3 (AP).—Fireball Flinger Rex Barney gained credit for two victories over the Pittsburgh Pirates today as the Brooklyn Dodgers outslugged the Pirates, 11-6 and 8-7. A crowd of 24,744 paid to see the twin bill.

Barney started the opener, but left for a pinch hitter in the sixth when the Dodgers scored four times to take a 10-4 lead. He came back in the sixth inning of the nightcap with the score 6-5 and blanked the Pirates the rest of the way.

DEAR FOLKS:

This columnist's campaign for a "Consolation" Daily Double payoff finally bore fruit at least in this State. No longer will holders of a winner in the first half of the double receive only their $2 back if their second horse is scratched. Here's the wording of the rule submitted by Racing Commission Chairman Beverley Broun and ok'd by his group: "In the event a horse is scratched in the second half of the daily double after the first race has been run, a separate pool shall be made, including all the tickets, which combined the horse scratched, and the holders of those tickets which include the winner of the first race and the scratched horse shall be paid in the same manner as the pool is calculated for a winning combination."

This came up the opening day and Broun got right to work on it. Maryland's commission is expected to follow suit. The situation arose three times last summer on smaller tracks and this spring at Havre de Grace. Several other States already have such a rule. I don't know whether Trainer Huppy Davis intended to start the mare, Rusty Pots, at this meeting, but she has other business now—a brand-new colt at her side, foaled yesterday morning. Mother and son are doing well in a stall generally reserved for running horses. See you on the rail. BILL.

Remolee Barred for Crowding

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 3.—Today's program of the Charles Town Jockey Club began as quietly as the evening breeze that shuffles through the cypress trees as favorites won the first two races and produced a mere $9.40 pay-off on the daily double.

But from that point on, things happened with a gusto. Among the more important were:

1. Remolee won the featured sixth race, but was disqualified after crowding the field at the stretch run. The victory went officially to Mrs. R. R. Miller's Alimony, an aptly named 6-year-old from the mare Cold Charity.

2. Apprentice Jockey Jimmy Baird was exonerated of blame by the stewards, who contended Remolee, an 11-year-old, was at fault.

3. Jockey Woodrow Kirk of Silver Spring, Md., was suspended for five days for cutting over on the field from the outside post position in the fifth race. He was aboard Rush Order. This race was won by N. S. Scava's Sincon at a $9 mutuel.

4. In a photo finish that was almost a dead heat, Jockey Emilo Carrillo, who was also aboard Alimony, got Miss Crystelle Waggoner's French Nine up in the final jump to the tune of a $60.40 mutuel after important money had been played on Edmar Jojan, the horse he whipped.

5. Baird upset the dope in the eighth race by winning with Flags at a $19.80 mutuel to make six heavy prices in a row.

Jockey Escapes

6. Jockey Albert Vesselli escaped injury when High Straight fell and broke a shoulder in the third race. The horse had to be destroyed.

7. G. N. Naugle's Essie May was badly cut about the right hind leg in the seventh race and had to be pulled up by Jockey Witmer.

8. Ringside Table and Running Riot, $5 shots, won the first and second races, respectively, and produced the $9.40 pay-off in the double.

Feller Has "Hitch" in Arm

Cleveland, June 3 (U.P.).—Bob Feller, the Cleveland Indians' $80,000-salaried pitcher who has failed to finish his last three mound starts, revealed today that he has developed a hitch in his pitching style and blamed it for his current slump.

The big Indian fireballer said that his arm has been "tight" in the shoulder for a good part of the season, but insisted that it was not sore.

"I guess I've been holding back, maybe unconsciously, and not following through properly with my pitches in an effort to get better control of the ball," Feller said.

Coolidge Wins Golf Crown, 5-1

Calvin Coolidge High, winner of the football, basketball and baseball championships this school year, added the interhigh golf title to its laurels yesterday by defeating Wilson, 5-1, in a golf match at Army-Navy County Club. The victory was the fifth straight for undefeated Coolidge in interhigh play.

Bob Montgomery, Williams Matched for Lightweight Title

Philadelphia, June 3 (AP).—A final settlement of the long-disputed lightweight boxing championship was promised today with signing of Philadelphia Bob Montgomery and Ike Williams of Trenton, N. J., for a 15-round title bout at Municipal Stadium August 4.

Montgomery is recognized as champ by the New York State Atheltic Commission and affilated States. Williams wears the same crown under sanction of the National Boxing Association, another group of State fistic governing bodies.

Managers of the two principals signed contracts and posted $1500 forfeits for the battle under promotion of Herman Taylor and sponsorship of Philadelphia Inquirer Charities, Inc.

It will be only the second ring meeting between the two Negro sluggers who have built up a bitter personal feud over the years.

Their first battle in 1944 was one of the bitterest and bloodiest ever seen here with Montgomery handing Williams a brutal beating before knocking him out in the last minute of the twelfth round.

Montgomery and Williams are about evenly matched for the title shot with Ike having scored 39 knockouts in 90 fights as against Montgomery's record of 45 kayos in 98. However, Williams has a five-year age advantage over the 28-year-old Montgomery.

Gannon, Stribling Both Hope to Meet Smug Hursey

If Smuggy Hursey is losing sleep because he seems to have run out of local opposition, he can roll over and catch a few winks immediately.

A couple of local mittmen, disturbed no little that the Smug is reportedly looking elsewhere for competition, are eager as all get out to take him on. They are Joe Gannon and Ken Stribling, who headline Matchmaker Bage Menendez's Monday night's bargain bill at Griffith Stadium.

Gannon, deserting the 175-pound class to campaign in the more lucrative middleweight ranks, feels he'll be ready to trade punches with Hursey as soon as he's disposed of Stribling Monday. Strib, of course, poo-poos that kind of talk because he's downright certain that Gannon won't prove too much of an obstacle for him.

Stribling points to his kayo verdict over Frank Sweeney, who dropped a close nod to Gannon.

Marshall, U. S. Fighter, Stops Mills in Britain

Mills caught a hard left and was counted out after 2 minutes and 58 seconds of the fifth frame.

Mills, weighing 176¼ pounds, exchanged blows with Marshall in the opening seconds of the first round and was tapped by a right cross. Marshall, at 166¼ pounds, stepped back slightly and left Mills shadow boxing and unable to focus his eyes for several seconds.

It was apparent then that Mills was not in the form he had shown only a year ago.

Mills, a fugitive from the carnival side shows via the Royal Air Force, went down in the second round without taking a punch but was up at the count of two. In the third, he took counts of 8, 4 and 2. In the third, he took counts of 8, 4 and 2, and in only one of those did he appear to have been hurt.

Barefoot Boy With Cheek Meets Sexton at Turners

Emir Badui, the 230-pound Arabian prince, who wrestles barefooted, will attempt to lift the title from Champion Frank "Powerhouse" Sexton tonight at Turner's Arena in their one-hour time limit feature bout.

Badui, who hails from Saudi, Arabia, will pin his hopes for victory on his new-fangled "Arabian Deathlock" which has played havoc with the American grapplers.

Gino and Chick Garibaldi, wrestling brothers, will face the two-man combination of Stu Hart and Jan Blears. Maurice LaChappelle will tackle Farro Rinaldo and Red Ryan will meet Tiger Joe Marsh, the first bout at 8:45 p. m.

Dr. Garsson Testifies May Refused Pay

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Dr. Henry M. Garsson yesterday denied he forged invoices to cover up bribes paid to former Congressman Andrew Jackson May.

Dr. Garsson said he did offer to pay May for running the Cumberland Lumber Co., but that May would not take the money, so that the Garssons never paid him anything and he never asked for anything.

May and the Garsson brothers—Henry and Murray—are on trial for bribery and conspiracy before Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut in the District Court.

Prosecutor William A. Paisley told the jury the Garssons conspired with May to buy his influence for more than $50,000—when he was House Military chairman and their companies were piling up 78 million dollars in war business. Part of the payoff, Paisley said, was the Cumberland Lumber Co., which he said really belonged to the Congressman.

May Letters "Explained"

May, himself, said so, too, in letters he has told the jury were false, and were meant only to hide the true ownership from people in Kentucky.

Garsson companies paid $33,156.47 for lumber, invoices which the FBI showed were typed in the Garsson offices in Chicago. Although no lumber was delivered the Garssons carried it in their inventories.

Dr. Garsson explained yesterday that this was perfectly all right, that the invoices were not forged, but were drawn up in Chicago to content the auditors who might be curious about the big advances to Cumberland.

When his staff talked about lumber "in transit," Dr. Garsson added, that didn't mean any lumber was in transit, it just meant it was not at the Garsson factory but somewhere else.

"Pro Forma Invoices"

And the invoices on which the books showed the money was paid were not the real thing, Dr. Garsson went on, they were "pro forma invoices." He said all they meant was that money had been advanced on lumber which was supposed to be delivered. He said money was advanced to other lumber companies this way, and that the "pro forma invoice" was a regular thing with the Government during the war.

Who drew up the Cumberland invoices was just as much a mystery as ever last night. Dr. Garsson said he ordered it done and he assumed somebody did it, but he did not know who it was. Whoever it was got his data from somewhere, but Dr. Garsson told the jury he did not know where the data came from.

Harry S. Glick, former assistant treasurer of the Garsson companies—Erie Basin and Batavia Metals—did not tell these things either when he was a witness a few weeks ago. But Glick did say that he got the invoices from Dr. Garsson, with orders to pay them, in November, 1944.

Indicted for Perjury

Dr. Garsson touched on the subject when he was a grand jury witness several months ago. He said then he did not give the invoices to Glick and did not know who did, and that he never saw them until late in 1945. The grand jury promptly indicted him on two counts of perjury.

From the invoices, Charles J. Margiotti, chief of the Garsson defense, turned to the testimony of another Government witness—Robert Paul O'Connor, former manager of the Batavia plant at Centerville, Iowa. O'Connor said he was called in to see Dr. Garsson in November, 1945, and told to fix his books to show $10,800 worth of lumber on hand, and to show that it had been on hand since April 30 that year.

Margiotti asked Dr. Garsson to explain, and Dr. Garsson said he never sent for O'Connor, and indeed did not buy the Centerville plant until December. All he ever told the plant manager was to see that Batavia books carried the Cumberland lumber invoices the same way as Erie Basin. That was to make it easy for the auditors, Dr. Garsson said, and not to hide anything.

Erie Basin was the company that carried the $33,156 worth of lumber as inventory after paying the three invoices.

As for O'Connor saying Dr. Garsson told him Senate investigators never would check close enough to spot the change, the doctor said yesterday that it was not Senate agents, it was Accounting Office auditors. And all he said was that they would not be interested in the lumber inventory.

In fact, Dr. Garsson declared, he did not know the Senate was investigating Cumberland Lumber Co., until April, 1946, so that nothing he did could have been prompted by such an investigation. All he had known before that was that the Senate was investigating Erie Basin and Batavia, and he learned that in 1945.

Dr. Garsson will start his fourth day as a witness in his own behalf this morning.

FitzGerald Is Named to Succeed Pendleton As Topographic Chief of Geological Survey

Gerald FitzGerald, 49, who helped the Army develop trimetrogon mapping as a means of worldwide coverage for military operations, has been appointed chief topographic engineer of the Geological Survey, the Department of Interior announced yesterday.

He succeeds Thomas P. Pendleton, 61, who was retired at his own request because of a prolonged illness. Pendleton was founder of the photogrammetric (obtaining surveys through photography) process known as the multiplex method of topographic mapping.

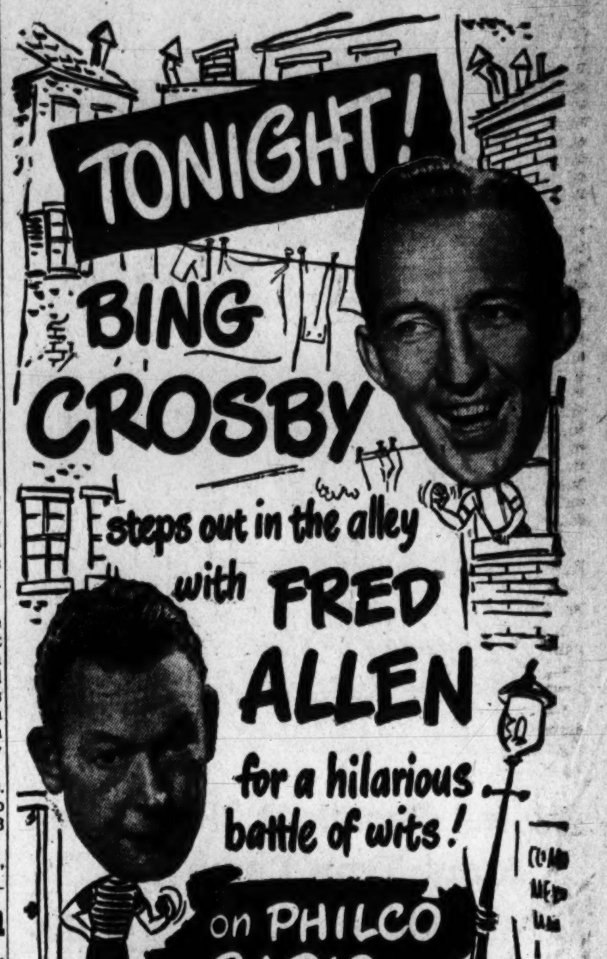

FitzGerald Pendleton

FitzGerald is a native of Burns, Oreg., and attended the University of Washington. He joined Geological Survey in 1917 and spent most of the next 25 years on surveying and mapping assignments in Alaska.

With the rank of colonel, he commanded the Aeronautical Chart Service during World War II. In 1944 he received the Fairchild Photogrammetric Award for his work in developing trimetrogon mapping, a cooperative program between the Geological Survey and the Army Air Forces.

He lives with his wife, Mrs. Geraldine FitzGerald, and two daughters, Betty and Pat, at 6603 Summit ave., Chevy Chase, Md.

A native of Nicolaus, Calif., Pendleton attended the University of California and joined the Geological Survey in 1905. He was an officer in World War I, and shortly after the war, was granted two years' leave of absence from Geological Survey to handle mapping assignments for the Standard Oil Co. of New York in Turkey, Palestine and the Balkans. He was appointed chief topographic engineer in 1943. He lives with his wife, Mrs. Florence Pendleton, and son Thomas, at 7605 Dellwood pl., Bethesda, Md.

Eisler Goes On Trial Today for Contempt

Defendant Also Must Face Court On June 16 on Passport Charge

Gerhart Eisler will testify in his own defense this week at his trial for contempt of Congress, Defense Attorney David Rein said yesterday.

Identified by the FBI as the liaison between Moscow and the Communist Party in the United States, Eisler will go on trial today before District Judge Alexander Holtzoff.

Contempt proceedings were instigated when he refused to testify before the House Un-American Activities Committee. Eisler insisted he be permitted to make a statement before being sworn as a witness at the committee hearings last February 6.

First of Two Trials

The trial will be the first of two. The second one will begin June 16, said United States Attorney George M. Fay, for passport fraud.

On the contempt charge he faces a maximum penalty of one year and a fine of $1000. On each of three counts involving passport frauds the maximum is five years and $5000.

Rein said Eisler's defense will be that he was not in contempt of Congress because he was ready and willing to testify. Besides, said Rein, Eisler is an interned enemy alien and as such he is entitled to be treated in the same manner as prisoners of war.

Called Powerful Agent

"At hearings before the Un-American Activities Committee, the FBI and numerous other witnesses testified that Eisler was probably the most powerful Communist in the country and that he was a representative of the Comintern.

Besides, said the FBI, Eisler's "clandestine activities" indicate he may be involved in intelligence work for the Soviets.

Assistant U. S. Attorney William Hitz said he was not certain that Eisler's sister, Ruth Fisher, would be called as a prosecution witness. She told the committe that Eisler was sent from Germany on many missions for the Comintern.

Eisler was released on bond of $20,000 pending trial.

52 Graduate At Cathedral School Here

Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, yesterday held out the cross of Christianity as the symbol of life for 52 girl graduates of the National Cathedral School here.

"The cross reaches up vertically to God and stretches across horizontally to the outermost bounds of humanity," Bishop Dun told the graduates, at commencement exercises in Washington Cathedral.

In the colorful services, Mary Wilson, daughter of United States Senator and Mrs. George Wilson of Iowa, served as crucifer. Polly Stott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stott, jr., of this city, was color bearer, and Patty Frohman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Frohman of this city, was diploma bearer.

Commencement exercises will be held at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow for graduates of Dunbarton College of Holy Cross in the college auditorium. Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, secretary general of the Catholic University of America, will confer the degrees.

Valedictory evening will be held at the college at 8 p. m. today. A baccalaureate mass will be celebrated at 9:15 a. m. tomorrow in the Chapel of Our Lady of Sorrows. Celebrant will be the Very Rev. Dr. J. M. Campbell, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Catholic University.

Civitans Elect Dowell as New President

A. Yates Dowell, District patent attorney, was elected and installed as president of the Civitan Club of Washington at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Dowell, a native of Raleigh, N. C., came to Washington in 1918. He was an examiner in the United States Patent Office from 1918 to 1920, and was affiliated with Alexander and Dowell, patent lawyers, during 1921. He was with the law firm of Ernest W. Bradford from 1923 to 1929, and after several years in New York he returned to take up Mr. Bradford's practice in 1934.

He lives at 3026 Newark st. nw.

Other officers elected and installed were Meigs Newkirk, first vice president; George Bisset, second vice president, and Frank Porter, third vice president.

Kelvin Shivers, Thomas B. Hopper and Clayton Brown were installed as new directors.

George McAfee, football star with the Chicago Bears and member of the firm of McAfee-Porter Engineering Co., and Lawrence Hyde, president of the Peters Engineering Co., were initiated into membership of the club.

City News in Brief

Family Tiff Settled By Judge

A family quarrel which developed because of a father's determination that his 17-year-old daughter shouldn't go out too much was settled yesterday by Municipal Court Judge Aubrey Fennell.

The father, Thomas Buckley, 40, of 3509 Dent pl. nw., came before Judge Fennell charged with assault against his daughter, Joan. The complainant was his wife.

Mrs. Buckley told the court that last Thursday night she heard her daughter screaming and rushed to her room to find her husband threatening the girl with uplifted hand.

"I didn't hit her," said Buckley. "I just threatened to."

Buckley said he had forbidden his daughter to have more than one date a week with a boy named "Billy."

"I thought she ought to mingle more," said the father. "I tried to keep her dates down to one a week. That's why there is no juvenile delinquency in my home."

Judge Fennell freed Buckley on his personal bond and remarked: "A child has a duty to respect and obey the parents, and a father has a duty to guide and direct his children, but a child's respect for its parents depends on both parents alike.

"You, too," he said to the mother, "can do much to prevent a situation like this occurring."

903 Tokens Sent In

Children's Hospital received 903 tokens yesterday which Capital Transit Co. redeemed for $75.25. Along with the tokens, there was $13.74 in cash.

Since The Post's District Line column suggested that invalidated transit tokens be contributed to the hospital, 4157 envelopes have been received containing 20,457 tokens and $375.80 in cash. The tokens have been redeemed for $1704.75.

Weiner's Weenies Went

Some $1359 worth of weenie ingredients were stolen yesterday from Joseph Weiner, almost from under his nose. He parked his truck, a bright red and yellow one at 5th and L sts. nw., and made a delivery to a nearby market. On return he found the truck had vanished, and along with it some 3000 pounds of meat belonging to the Quality Beef Co. of Baltimore. Police have been alerted.

What Do You Think?

Was it constitutional for Virginia to regain its original share of the District?

Representative Walter Horan (R., Wash.) said yesterday the time is coming when that question should be reviewed in Congress. He emphasized his House District Appropriations Subcommittee does not plan to seek the answer. That, he said, should be done by the House District Committee.

He raised the question in discussing District revenue problems, and added that the residents of nearby Virginia make considerable use of District facilities.

Attache's Son, 2 Other Boys Hurt in Traffic

Three small boys—one of them the son of the naval attache at the Peruvian Embassy—were struck by vehicles on District streets yesterday.

Police said Willie Tirado, 5, of 2520 Woodley rd. nw., whose father, Comdr. Guillermo Tirado, is the Peruvian naval attache, was struck by an auto while playing in the street in front of 2641 Woodley pl. nw.

The other two were Herman Polak, 8, of 1754 Kenyon st. nw., and Allison Armstrong, 5, of 2320 H st. nw.

The Tirado boy was first treated by Dr. Alexander Gish of 2701 Connecticut ave. nw. He was then taken to Garfield Hospital, where it was reported he may have suffered a skull fracture.

The automobile which struck the boy was operated by Jules I. Kanter, 2627 Adams Mills rd. nw. They said witnesses reported the boy had run into the street after a ball.

A fractured skull may also have been suffered by the Polak boy who was struck by a Capital Transit bus at an alleyway entrance on 18th st. nw. near Irving st. At Children's Hospital, it was said that the boy had also suffered a dislocated shoulder and cuts and brush burns.

Police said the bus was driven by Jack Wines, 36, of 4523 34th st., Brentwood, Md.

The Armstrong boy was struck on H st. nw., almost in front of his house, by an automobile which police said was operated by Harold B. Leith, 27, of 4828 New Hampshire ave. nw. The boy was taken to Children's Hospital with a possible brain concussion.

Victim of Tar Explosion Dies

Giuseppe Biancaniello, 45, died at Garfield Hospital yesterday from burns suffered May 26 when a 5-gallon can of tar exploded in the basement recreation room of his home, 911 Decatur st. nw.

Two relatives also injured in the mishap, a brother, Steven Biancaniello, 57, and a nephew, Anthony Biancaniello, 23, both of 5525 Illinois ave. nw. are reported recovering. Both have been released from the hospital.

Ex-Officer Indicted in Check Deals

Former Policeman Allegedly 'Certified' Checks for Pleasure Jaunts to Tropics

A former Metropolitan policeman, who it is alleged, manufactured his own "certified" checks to pay expenses of pleasure jaunts to Miami, Cuba and Puerto Rico, yesterday was indicted by a Federal grand jury in District Court.

He is William James Smith, 41, who was arrested in Miami April 12 on the tip of a pretty red-haired night club photographer who told the manager of her apartment that she "feared" Smith. The girl, Beverly "Billie" Carroll, was formerly a night club photographer here.

Indicted on 3 Counts

Smith is under indictment on one count of falsely made securities and two counts of false pretenses.

According to police, Smith bought a check "protector," a rubber stamp to print "certified" and other similar equipment from a Wasnington second-hand store. With this equipment purchased for $45, Smith, police said, manufactured and cashed checks for thousands of dollars.

On December 7, 1946, Smith is alleged to have purchased $2000 in travelers checks from American Express Co. office here, giving his own checks in payment.

Police said Smith was dismissed from the Metropolitan force in 1944 by the District Commissioners for "conduct unbecoming an officer."

Among 36 others indicted yesterday were Madeline Davis, 44, and her daughter Janice, 22, both of 520 Park rd. nw., on charges of performing an illegal operation.

The women were arrested May 19 at the Park rd. address. A woman, found there at the time, later required hospitalization. She told police she had paid $205 for the operation.

Among six indictments that were ignored and referred to Police Court was one involving Marvin B. Stevens, Baltimore, in connection with the traffic death of John H. Cook, 27, of 515 8th st. ne., March 19.

Another ignored involved Samuel J. Andrews, who had been held for investigation following a housebreaking.

12 Are Indicted On Gambling Charges Here

Seven District men and two women were indicted yesterday on charges of operating numbers games. They face a maximum sentence of $1000 fine or three years in jail or both.

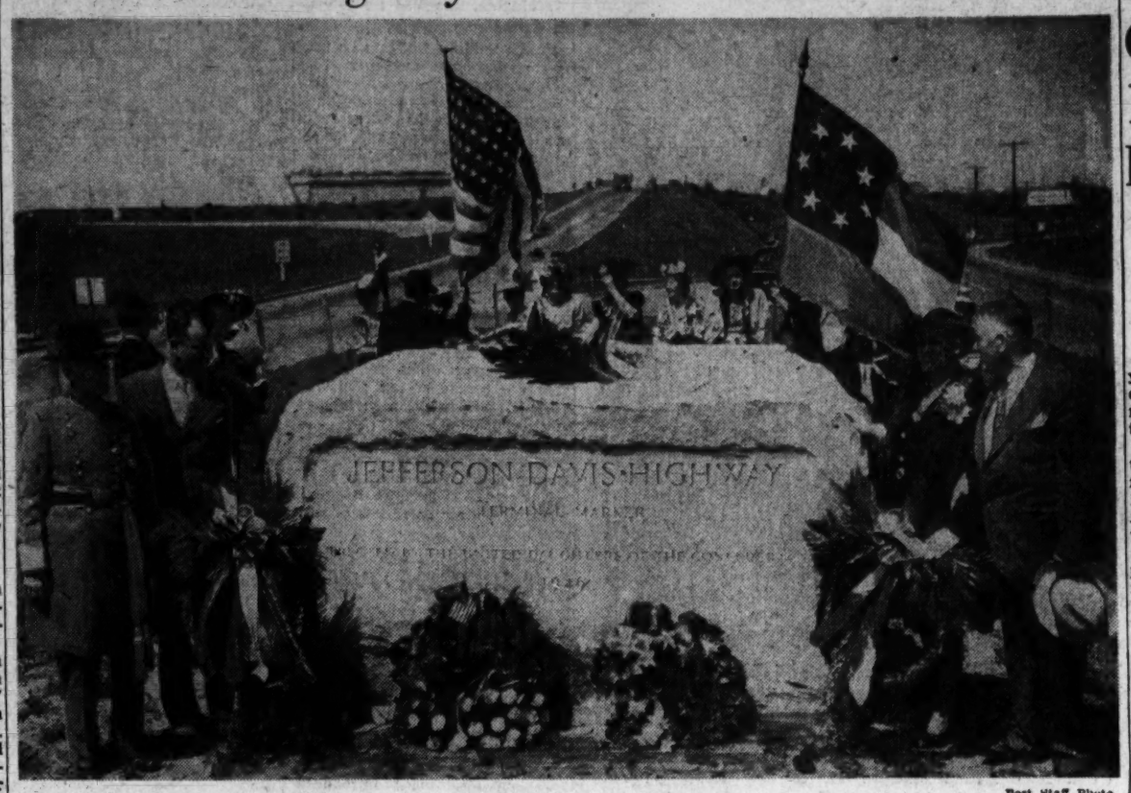

Three other men, indicted for setting up gaming tables, face possible sentences of not more than 5 years.

Those indicted on the numbers charge were: Gilbert Proctor, 1456 Fuller st., nw.; Charles I. Wade, jr., 1831 Fenwick st., ne.; Elroy Tolbert, 422 3d st., ne.; Bernice P. Tolbert, 422 3d st., ne.; Charles A. Suydam, 591 F st., nw.; Rebecca Jones, 1246 Stevens rd., se.; Robert F. Norwood, 501 L st., ne.; Elsie E. Madden, 5036 Call pl., se.

Charged with setting up gaming tables were: Sam Flakowitz, 509 E st., nw.; William Poindexter, 1721 1st st., nw., and Lee Ward, 144 Thomas st., nw.

Elroy Tolbert, Bernice Tolbert and Suydam were arrested in a raid at 422 3d st., nw., May 2.

Detective Hurt In Fall While Making Arrest

Pushed From Porch During Tussle With Beating Case Suspect

Detective Sergt. Howard E. Ogle was severely injured early yesterday while attempting to make an arrest.

Ogle

Ogle, who is 49, crashed through a porch railing and fell 10 feet to a concrete stairway. He was taken to Emergency Hospital with a possible fractured back.

Police Surgeon Dr. Benjamin F. Dean, jr., said late yesterday it may be several days before the full extent of Ogle's injuries is determined.

Under arrest on an open charge pending outcome of the detective's injuries is John Junior Doyle, 26, of 603 I st. nw., who also is held in connection with the beating of a woman. The woman, Miss Genevieve Mary Holbrock, 28, of 711 G st. nw., also was hospitalized as a result of the attack.

Police had received a call that a man was beating a woman in the 700 block of G st. nw., and Police Pvt. William J. Cahill had responded.

Ogle, driving past the scene, joined in the pursuit when the suspect fled, and pursued the man to a second-floor porch at 736 8th st. nw. In the struggle, Ogle, who weighs about 200 pounds, crashed through the railing.

Doyle was taken into custody a short time later by another policeman.

Confederate Daughters Hear Barkley on 'Responsibility'

Senator Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.), yesterday called on the United Daughters of the Confederacy to always remember American responsibility to show the rest of the world a democratic way of life.

The occasion was the unveiling of the Eastern terminal marker of Jefferson Davis Highway. The large stone marker, erected by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, is on the Virginia side of Highway Bridge.

After praising Davis as a man of inspiration and moral character, endowed with gifts of leadership, Barkley stated that he deserves the "deep respect of every American, regardless of politics or geography." Then he declared:

"As we dedicate this marker, we cannot forget our responsibilities now as a united Nation. I'm proud to feel that our Nation today, from every section, has given of our blood, toil and resources so that the rest of the world can know democracy and freedom."

Jefferson Davis Highway, starting here, stretches along the East Coast, across the Southern part of the country and up the West Coast to Blaine, Wash. The highway, with its historical markers, was sponsored by the UDC.

The UDC's three-day observance here of Jefferson Davis' 139th birthday anniversary was brought to a close last night with a banquet at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

Streptomycin Has New Uses, Walter Reed Symposium Told

Streptomycin, hailed as the "miracle drug" and later debunked, is proving effective against certain serious and fatal conditions which fail to respond to two other wonder drugs, penicillin and sulfa compounds.

The evaluation was presented yesterday by Maj. Edwin J. Pulaski of the Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex., before the opening session of a three-day symposium being held at the Army Medical Center, Walter Reed Hospital.

According to Pulaski, streptomycin effects a rapid and permanent cure for tuleremia, and has proved a life saver in several mixed infections of the ear, brain and spinal cord. Some of the most dramatic results with the drug, he said, have been obtained in cases of meningitis.

Streptomycin is tasteless and when added to the milk formula for babies has brought about "good results" in infantile diarrhea, Major Pulaski said.

In a discussion of the medical effects caused by atomic explosion, Col. James P. Cooney, Atomic Energy Commission medical adviser, offered the following figures, based on British estimates, of the atomic bomb's destructive power.

If an atom bomb similar to the one dropped at Nagasaki exploded at the same height over a city such as London, it would completely wreck 30,000 houses, badly damage 35,000 and damage from 50,000 to 100,000 others. It would kill 75,000 persons, compared with the standard 500-pound bomb which would kill six persons if dropped in the same area, and the blockbuster, which would cause the death of 30.

Bowen Found Guilty of Rape, Evades Death

Prisoner Faces Penitentiary Term Of 10 to 30 Years

A District Court jury deliberated for two hours yesterday and found Harry R. Bowen, 29, guilty of raping a 37-year-old waitress on the Library of Congress grounds last January 10.

The jury's failure to recommend the death penalty saved Bowen from the chair. However, he faces a prison sentence of from 10 to 30 years.

During the trial it was related how Bowen, a dishwasher, whose address is 419 4th st. se., twice raped the woman while holding her captive in the shrubbery on the Library of Congress grounds.

The woman said she had left the library shortly before 9 p. m. the night of January 10 and was walking east on East Capitol st. when Bowen approached, smashed her in the face with his fist and dragged her from the sidewalk into the grounds of the library.

According to her story, Bowen fled after warning her not to report the attack. Bowen, who had a previous police record, was picked up by police the following night while loitering near the scene of the attack.

Charles E. Ford defended Bowen while John Burke, assistant United States attorney, was prosecutor.

No Further Cut in Pepco 1946 Rates, PUC Decides

Still Possibility Of More Refunds From D. C. Utility's 1945 Surplus Funds

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ruled that no further reduction would be applied to Potomac Electric Power Co. rates for the year beginning March 1, 1946.

The decision does not rule out the possibility of additional refunds to local consumers covering 1945 Pepco surplus funds, PUC Accountant V. A. McElfresh revealed.

It merely indicates that the surplus will not be disposed of in a manner affecting the company's 1946 financial record, which PUC will examine Thursday at 10 a. m. in the District Building, he said.

Exact amount of the excess earnings has not been determined by PUC.

Three estimates of the surplus have so far been advanced: Pepco says it's only $295,429; PUC accountants figure $490,482; and Treasury Department officials maintain it amounts to $580,103.

In addition to deciding the exact amount, PUC must determine how to dispose of it.

Two methods now remain, McElfresh said. PUC could order the surplus either refunded to consumers for the year 1945 or placed in a reserve fund to be carried forward and used by the company to offset future deficits.

The refund plan would give consumers who used power here in 1945 an additional rebate. The sum, McElfresh said, would be added to the refunds consumers will receive next September when Pepco makes adjustments covering rate differences during the past three years.

Treasury officials favor a refund to consumers but both McElfresh and Pepco accountants have recommended setting up the special reserve fund to forestall possible future rate increases.

NLRB Orders Pepco To Deal With Foremen

The Potomac Electric & Power Co. has been ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to bargain collectively with a union composed of its supervisory employes.

Spokesmen for the NLRB said yesterday the decision affirmed a previous ruling by a trial examiner, who ruled that the union was qualified to negotiate with the company. The utility had refused to bargain with the union, according to NLRB, contending that a union composed of supervisory employes was "inappropriate and illegal."

The union, the Electric Utility Foremen's Association, was certified by the labor board May 7, 1946. Its members include about 70 assistant general foremen, foremen, assistant foremen, watch engineers, power dispatchers, administrative clerks, chief inspectors, assistant chief inspectors and others.

The board's decision resulted from a hearing of union and company representatives held April 22.

'Ideal Father' Entry Helpful Around House

A dad who takes his son to nursery school on his way to work and helps around the house was nominated yesterday for the title, "ideal father of 1947."

The entry was one of the first to reach The Washington Post which is conducting an area-wide contest to discover the best father.

The winning dad will be honored on Father's Day, June 15, with a dinner at a hotel, a show, guest appearance on Radio Station WINX and presentation of a plaque. His family will share in all the honors.

"In addition to holding his job, my father is now working on his master's degree at the University of Maryland," wrote 2½-year-old Johnny. "Yet he has time to be good to my little sister and me."

The judges in The Post newsroom suspect that Johnny had the help of his mother in writing this letter. If he did that's fine because wives as well as children are eligible to send in entries.

If you think the man in your household is the best dad of all, tell The Post about it. Write down his qualifications and send your entry to the Ideal Father Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Deadline is June 11 so letters must be postmarked by midnight June 10. The winner will be announced June 13.

Curley Will Lists Deposits Totaling $2179

The will of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, late Archbishop of the Diocese of Baltimore and Washington, was filed for probate in Baltimore yesterday and listed deposits totaling $2179 to be used as contributions for masses.

According to the Associated Press, associates of the archbishop indicated that he had disposed of most of his property and money prior to his death on May 16.

The will left his clothing to the Little Sisters of the Poor and his pontifical garments and accoutrements to the Baltimore Cathedral for the use of successors.

The archbishop left his books to the Right Rev. Msgr. Joseph M. Nelligan, chancellor of the archdioceses. His will requested Msgr. Nelligan to keep funeral expenses "down to a minimum," and to use the remaining funds for masses "for the repose of my soul, the souls of my parents, relatives and friends."

The only Catholic prelate to head two archdioceses, Archbishop Curley died of a cerebral hemorrhage at Bon Secours Hospital, Baltimore, after an illness of several months.

Checkup Urged On Police Chief Candidates

Candidates for superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department would be given a "good screening" under provisions of a bill introduced on Capitol Hill yesterday.

Gillie

Representative George W. Gillie (R., Ind.), former sheriff of Indiana's Allen County, asked that the House District Committee investigate the candidates because the police post is an "important job."

The move came in the continued illness of Maj. Harvey G. Callahan, police superintendent. He has been ill since February 1 with a stomach ailment. No date has been set for his return to duty.

On file with the District Commissioners are the names and records of 15 Police Department men who have been mentioned as candidates for the superintendency. Commissioner J. Russell Young has said that studies of the records will continue until assurance has been given that Major Callahan will return to duty.

Gillie's resolution went to the House Rules Committee. Members had indicated earlier they would keep hands off the police appointment.

Meanwhile, House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.) said his subcommittee plans a thorough investigation aimed at better coordination between the separate police organizations in and around Washington.

Air Conditioner on

D. C. Center To Cool Off Next Week

Government employes in the Municipal Center need not worry that they will have to swelter through the summer for lack of air-conditioning.

The large unit, cooling the building, will be turned on at least by the beginning of next week, Howard Akers, assistant superintendent of District buildings, promised yesterday.

Air-conditioning in some other District buildings and Federal Government buildings has been on for several weeks, it was learned. Akers explained that the Municipal Center delay is due to a delay in the shipment of Freon gas and cylinders needed to operate the system.

"We placed our order last March for enough Freon gas to run all the air-conditioning units in District buildings through the summer. The company was a month late sending our supply, however," he said.

He explained that the District bought its Freon gas from the Pennsylvania Engineering Co. in Philadelphia, which normally requires only a month's notice to ship the product. This year, however, it was a month late because of a shortage of the gas, he said.

Charles A. Peters, deputy commissioner for buildings management, PBA, said the air conditioning was turned on in Federal buildings about the middle of May. There is plenty of Freon on hand to last the summer, he said. He explained that the Federal Government had ordered the Freon it needed as early as last Fall.

Divorcee, 33, Engaged to Wed Nice Young Man, Discovers He is Six Years Her Junior; Now She's Anxious and Angry, Though She Loves Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am planning to be married to a very nice young man. He has every qualification to be a good husband, in my opinion. However, one drawback has presented itself and I am afraid it is going to wreck our plans.

Recently, while visiting his relatives, I chanced to hear a remark, innocently made, which made me suspicious of his age. I later discovered indirectly—without his knowledge or that of his family—that he is six years my junior. He is 26; I am 33.

We have never discussed ages pointblank, although both of us more or less sensed that I am a little older than he,—a fact that I have resented a little, being somewhat afraid of the unorthodox. Now I feel that his concealment of his age was a shabby trick or deliberate lie on his part, which places me in a foolish position.

Fears She Can't Hold Him Always

WE WISH very much to marry each other. We feel that we are ideally mated, as we never quarrel and seem to understand each other so well. I can't very well give him up, feeling as I do about him, yet my practical streak says marriage wouldn't work, with that age difference between us.

Then again I think he must love me very much to conceal his age, as I'm sure he knew I wouldn't have considered him seriously had I known the truth earlier. What do you think of the situation? Should I talk to him about it? Or am I the immature one, afraid to take a chance?

My first marriage ended in divorce and I don't think I could bear his drifting away from me in later years because of the difference in our ages. Please advise.

J. F.

Fear, Reactions Wreck Happiness

DEAR J. F.: Latent emotions of fear, anxiety and guilt are the wreckers of human happiness. And these are your feelings about your six years' seniority to your fiance. Not that the age difference of itself justifies such agitation, but because these states of mind are habitual with you subconsciously, hence easily roused to volcanic expression.

Anxiety and resentment are almost synonymous emotions. When one is anxious, with a stymied helpless feeling about it, one is also resentful,—blindly resentful of whatever person or situation one is anxious about.

In this case, notice your statement that you've been resentful of the tacitly understood but unfaced fact that you are older than the man. And notice, too, your emotional tendency to be furiously angry with him—at least in your thoughts—as the fear that you can't hold him mounts.

At this point in your anxiety state—running true to neurotic pattern—you suddenly blame him altogether for the emotional fix you're in. You call it "a shabby trick or deliberate lie on his part," that the age angle hasn't been faced and assessed, to see if it matters. Which is perfectly ridiculous and absurdly unfair to him.

Her Indignation Is Face-Saving

ACTUALLY, you were perfectly willing to play ostrich on that score, if he were willing to play along, too—asking no questions and telling no lies—and if it didn't attract attention otherwise. Your acute defensive agitation flared up, in the form of outraged indignation beamed at him, after one of his relatives in your hearing blandly stressed his age.

You say the remark was innocently made, but judging by the way you've taken it to heart, I gather you felt it was a deliberate barb,—but don't like to admit, even to yourself, that you could be the butt of disparaging innuendo. You find it more comfortable to cling to the conviction that he's the one to be criticized, that he deceived you and let you down, in case the ostrich game doesn't work, or the age-difference is gossiped about.

Since that difference is sensed by both of you, and from the first has caused uneasiness in you, yet never has been brought to discussion, we may infer that there is precious little "meeting of minds" in the relationship. Presumably the attraction is primarily and perhaps exclusively physical.

Poorly Prepared To Be Good Wife

THE FACT that the subject hasn't been broached pointblank reflects no discredit on the man. Given natural delicacy or any smidgen of good manners, he wouldn't introduce the topic if aware of your seniority. He'd wait on you to do it, if you thought it mattered; and if you comfortably let it slide—in bonafide indifference to it—so would he, without concern.

You are pathetically immature, yes. In your present state, based on a chronic anxiety neurosis seriously worsened by the failure of your first marriage, you would be a bad wife to the man, morbidly putting him on the defensive about warring emotions within yourself that he couldn't fathom, much less relieve—try as he might.

I doubt that talking things over with him would help. The distrait discourse you have in mind would deeply disturb him, although he might offer reassurance. He is looking to you for wisdom and ballast you haven't got; and in preparation for second marriage, you urgently need psychotherapy.

Town Talk—

By Eva Hinton

It's always hard to leave Washington. There are so many kind and attractive friends, so many gay parties, and so many interesting things to do. The cave-dwellers are so hospitable about sharing their caves, that soon one feels like a cave-dweller too.

But after awhile one begins to wonder how one's own "cave" back home is getting on. So one fine (well, semifine) morning one finds oneself on a plane headed for Nashville, Tenn., home of that other one-time Washington resident, Andrew Jackson.

Suddenly the stewardess came by and said "Fastern your belts!" (I bet mine was fastened first and tightest.) There was nothing but a dark, impenetrable mist outside, and the sound of hail-stones beating on the wings like bullets. The plane dipped and fell, rose and twisted. I read the New Yorker with great attention, wishing I was back in Georgetown, wishing I hadn't eaten any lunch, wondering how I'd look and feel hanging from the ceiling by my safety belt if the plane went bottoms up!

Finally we emerged above a solid mass of white clouds that stretched to the blue horizon like an endless glacier. Eventually we saw land below and came down through a thin cloud to land on the Nashville airfield.

A DEEP breath and we're off to see the ancestral acres which the "ancestor" is turning into a very ritzy subdivision. I know it's ritzy because there are as many rules as at Chevy Chase Club. Buyers must purchase 2 acres or more; their plans must be passed by a certain architect; they can't keep horses or cows unless they have a certain number of acres, and then not for commercial purposes, and lots cannot be subdivided.

After they've met the requirements and are the proud possessors of a lot, they can't build a house as big as required by the laws of the subdivision because of Government building restrictions. One rural-minded but discouraged family bought a lot with some magnificent trees, transported garden furniture from town and spent the weekends just sitting under a tree in the middle of their land.

There are magnificent trees and five big hills on the 1200 ancestral acres. Everywhere are huge oaks that must be as old as the Charter Oak in England. The forest must be the "forest primeval" because certainly the Indians didn't cut down everything and neither did the white settlers who followed.

THE ancestral hut has been taken down piece by piece and hauled away—an enormous "white elephant" of a pile of Victorian vintage, the original house having burned. But the old springhouse of native stone still stands, where the Yankee soldiers used to cool their milk. The Battle of Nashville was fought all over the front lawn.

Miss Jerry Siebert Will Be Married

Miss Jerry Siebert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Bowen of Florida and California, will become the bride of Dr. Kenneth S. Snyder, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Snyder of Scotia, N. Y., on Saturday.

The bridegroom-elect attended George Washington University school of government, Southeastern University law school, Union College and was graduated from Albany Medical College.

Miss Siebert was graduated from Pensacola Hospital school of nursing and attended Catholic University of America.

Czech Envoy Honors American Doctors

By Marie McNair

A GRATEFUL government bestowed decorations on 14 medical men yesterday when the Czechoslovak Ambassador Dr. Juraj Slavik, presented the Order of the White Lion at a ceremony and reception at the embassy.

At the request of UNRRA, and under the auspices of the Unitarian Service Committee, these members of the Unitarian Medical Mission spent two months in Czechoslovakia lecturing, demonstrating and operating, imparting to the doctors and surgeons there the United States' knowledge and use of medical science, as it has progressed in the six years of Nazi occupation during which Czechoslovakian medicine was at a standstill.

Called the "faculty on wheels," the group, all top men in their branch of the profession, performed miracles before the eyes of their Balkan colleagues.

Lung Operation Performed

Dr. Alex Brunschwig, recently appointed clinical professor of surgery at Cornell University School of Medicine, removed a lung—performing for the first time this difficult operation in that country. The wonders of penicillin, too, were explained, for, although large quantities of the drug had been shipped along with other UNRRA medical supplies, there was no one who knew how to administer it.

Dr. Paul Dudley White of Harvard Medical School was chairman of the mission and received the Order of the White Lion, 3d class. Other members, including Dr. Brunschwig, who won the 4th class order, were Dr. Ralph Waldo Gerard of the University of Chicago; Dr. Emery A. Rovenstine, New York University College of Medicine; Dr. Joseph Francis Volker, dean of Tufts College Dental School; Dr. Otto Krayer, Harvard Medical School; Dr. Joseph Peter Lasansky, Tufts Dental School; Dr. Milan Alexander Logan, head of the department of bio-chemistry, University of Cincinnati; Dr. Everett Dudley Plass, vice chairman of the University of Iowa Mission School; Dr. L. Emmett Holt, jr., chairman of the department of pediatrics, New York University's College of Medicine; Dr. Leo Davidoff, professor of neuro-surgery, Columbia University Medical School; Dr. Colin Munro McLeod, New York University College of Medicine; Dr. James E. M. Thompson of Lincoln, Nebr., president of the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons, and Dr. Joseph Charles Aub of Harvard Medical School.

100 Guests Present

The Ambassador and Mme. Slavik invited 100 or more guests to attend the ceremony yesterday, including high officials in the Unitarian Church, members of UNRRA and of the State Department, who stayed on for cocktails served from the buffet in the dining room.

Bryn Mawr Fund Drive Tops Goal

Bryn-Mawr, Pa., June 3.—Making the first progress report on the campaign to raise 2 million dollars for Bryn Mawr College, Mrs. F. Louis Slade of New York, national chairman, reported at the commencement exercises here today that the fund had reached $1,155,327.65 in cash pledges and legacies. This sum, Mrs. Slade reported, surpassing the goal set for commencement, makes possible the immediate raising of faculty salaries by 33 per cent in the lower brackets and 23 per cent in the upper brackets.

"Without waiting for our pledge to be completed," continued Mrs. Slade, "the president and board of directors of Bryn Mawr College had enough confidence in the alumnae to say that salary raises should be made beginning this coming year." Mrs. Slade pledged completion of the fund by June, 1948.

In accepting the gift to the college, President Katharine E. McBride declared the 1947 salary scale is a great step forward for Bryn Mawr and that new appointments will become possible for the first time in many years.

The present campaign was undertaken by the alumnae to increase faculty salaries which have not been raised since 1920 and to provide scholarships and academic projects.

Shoppers' League Denounces Hartley-Taft Labor Measure

In a jovial mood, Mrs. Julia Algase, newly elected chairman of the National League of Women Shoppers (left), and Mrs. Kathleen Clift, newly elected president of the Washington branch, discuss the organization's achievements. Occasion was the local league's luncheon yesterday at the YWCA

The Washington branch, National League of Women Shoppers, yesterday passed a resolution condemning the Hartley-Taft labor bill, and reaffirmed a motion opposing race segregation in the District, at a luncheon meeting held at the YWCA.

Expressing implicit belief in the worker's right to organize and that trade unions are the only guarantee of decent wages and working conditions, the motion, unanimously indorsed, reads that the "NLWS opposes the Hartley-Taft labor bill and amendments and any legislation which directly or indirectly wipes out the guarantees of labor's right to organize and bargain collectively, and, in recognition of the fact, that the proposal and fate of labor legislation rests in the hands of political parties, we oppose any attempts to limit labor's right to support financially or otherwise any political party."

Passage of the resolution by the Washington branch yesterday was a confirmation of the national league's stand.

The other resolution pledged the Washington league "to develop positive action to eliminate both the principle and practice of discrimination and segregation on account of race, creed or national origin and to aid in assuring to all members of the community equal economic opportunities, equal opportunities and facilities with respect to edcation, health, recreation and equal rights to ownership and use of property."

Purposes Outlined

Mrs. Julia Algase of New York, newly elected chairman of the National League of Women Shoppers, outlined the purposes and achievements of the organization. She told how the league had been "watch dog" of prices, rent control, rationing and other means to hold the prices down.

She described how the league spearheaded the "don't buy high price campaign," advocated the employment of Negroes in responsible jobs in New York department stores; investigated labor disputes.

Mrs. Algase pointed out that LWS doesn't have one paid worker or officer. All are volunteers.

Reviewing the work of the league, Mrs. Sylvia Wubnig, national legislation chairman, said that the organization was the first group to testify against the Wool bill.

Mrs. Kathleen Clift was elected president of the Washington League at the business session following the program.

Other officers named were Mrs. Mildred Netreba, executive secretary; Mrs. Helen Loeffler, treasurer, and Mrs. Lillian Maller, corresponding secretary.

Committee chairman chosen were Mrs. Sylvia Wubnig, national legislation; Mrs. Frances Lictenberg, District of Columbia legislation; Mrs. Anne Pess, labor; Mrs. Asho Craine, living standards.

Taking a quick glance at Washington Chapter of Hadassah's luncheon program are (left to right) Mrs. Joseph Freedman, newly installed president; Mrs. Martha Sharp, guest speaker, and Mrs. Philip I. Heyman, general chairman of the luncheon. The event, attended by approximately 800 women, was the local organization's twenty-sixth annual spring luncheon for the benefit of child welfare and was held yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel

Jewish Children in Europe Starving, Hadassah Is Told

By Genevieve Reynolds

Approximately 800 women yesterday heard Mrs. Martha Sharp of Boston paint a vivid, heart-breaking picture of Europe's emaciated Jewish children. Occasion was the twenty-sixth annual spring and installation luncheon given by the Washington Chapter of Hadassah at the Mayflower Hotel for the benefit of its child welfare.

The speaker, wife of the Rev. Waitstill Hastings Sharp, who has just returned from a tour to Palestine, France and Czechoslovakia, ran for the House of Representatives last year in Massachusetts opposing Speaker of the House, Joe Martin.

Mrs. Sharp told how the Nazis exterminated 75 per cent of Jewish girl children because they were unfit for hard labor and to prevent their reproducing.

Children Must Be Moved

"There are 54,000 Jewish children in Europe that need to be moved this year or next," she declared. "This is one of the greatest emergencies." Palestine needs them to help build up the homeland.

"There are 2000 Youth Aliyah children in France waiting to be cared for," she continued. "And I saw 2000 children in Cyprus waiting to enter Palestine on the quota."

Mrs. Sharp told how she saw children with sunken stomachs, hollow eyes and shrunken cheeks entering Palestine and later saw them transformed into normal, healthy children with hope in their eyes.

"I often heard the story," she said, "of how members of their families had been either sent to gas chambers or dismembered alive in concentration camps."

Wherever she talked with the war orphans they said, "Palestine is our only hope."

Shot At by Guards

When the Jewish children try to escape over the Polish border they are shot at by guards. However, the Czechoslovakian police rescue them when possible, according to Mrs. Sharp.

She went on to describe the growth of Palestine, the work of Hadassah Hospital there. "When I went to the hospital in Tel Aviv," she explained, "I saw a plaque of Washington Chapter of Hadassah. I can testify that you are doing a magnificent job."

Mrs. Sharp said that when it comes to hot school lunches, the schools in Palestine are ahead of those in the United States. As an example of ingenuity in that country, she cited how the people made refrigerators out of flowerpots, cleaning up the malarial swamps to rid the region of disease.

"Your doctors and nurses have revised the country's mortality rate from the highest in the world to number one place in live births," explained the speaker.

Although Hadassah has pledged eight million dollars for Youth Aliyah next year, she insisted that every cent and more would be needed to rehabilitate the Jewish war orphans.

Preceding Mrs. Sharp's address, the Minister Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Embassy, Josef Han, expressed appreciation for the help American organizations had given to his country. He said that much aid still is needed and that whatever is given will be fairly managed and distributed.

Mrs. Joseph Freedman was installed as president of Washington Chapter at the luncheon.

Other officers installed were: Mrs. Harry Friedman, Mrs. Joseph Mendelson, Mrs. William Oshinsky, Mrs. Harry Rubinstein, Mrs. Walter Ezekiel, vice presidents; Mrs. Bernard Lust, recording secretary; Mrs. Harry D. Friedman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. William Gichner, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Julius Diamond, financial secretary; Mrs. Philip Aurbach, assistant financial secretary; Mrs. Eugene Rosenblatt, administrative secretary; Mrs. Misha Ladden, assistant administrative secretary; Mrs. Harry Lourie, treasurer; Mrs. Hymen Freehof, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Meyer R. Bernstein, Mrs. David P. Cash, Mrs. Isaac Jacobson and Mrs. Paul Pearlman, trustees.

Young Fortunates of '47

Young arrivals in the summer of 1947 are luckier than the babies who put in an appearance a year ago, says My Baby Magazine. Although it is still difficult to find enough diapers and shirts, you will fare better on most purchases for the "Nursery Set." Fabrics themselves are finer and dainty imports are again available for the day dress that you probably won't be able to resist buying.

Of course any sane adviser will tell you that a new baby spends most of his time in a very streamlined ensemble; diaper, shirt and kimono. But there's still a margin for the delicate "best dress" for your "show off" special occasions.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

Will you kindly furnish me with information on how to use a pressure cooker? H. M. M.

The book of directions which came with your pressure cooker contains all of the information you need to operate that particular cooker. It is important that you read these directions before operating the cooker.

There are, however, a few genral rules which apply. If your cooker has a steam gauge, it should be tested at least once a year to see if it is functioning properly. The home service department of your electric company will be glad to do this, or put you in touch with someone who will.

If there is a safety pet cock for the escape of steam on your cooker, this should be taken apart and cleaned so that the little metal ball in it, which governs the escape of steam, is not stuck tight.

Would you please suggest a couple of good toasts to say before drinking? Where can I obtain a book of them? R.

"A toast to our friends both far and near;
A toast to those who are gathered here;
A toast to those we may sometime know;
A toast to the friends of long ago.
Friends come and go 'till life is done,
So here's a toast to every one."

"Here's to our Childhood, our Youth and Old Age.
And here's to the smiles we sow;
If we travel along,
With laughter and song,
We'll be welcome wherever we go."

These two toasts are from "A Speech for Every Occasion" by A. C. Edgerton, Noble & Noble, publishers. Other books containing toasts may be obtained at the public library or from a book dealer.

I have a large pottery vase which apparently is porous. Can you suggest a method of treatment to make this vessel waterproof? Through leakage, this vase has made a faint white mark on a mahogany table which has been polished with wax. Is there a method for removing this? Can you tell me how I may remove perspiration odor from a navy blue print dress? This garment has just been returned by the cleaners, but the odor remains. M. S. M.

If your vase has an opening large enough to get your hands into it, paint the inside with waterproof shellac. If the opening is not large, pour a little shellac into the vase and keep turning the vase until the shellac has covered all of the inside. Pour out surplus shellac.

To remove the white mark on your table, remove the old wax by applying liquid wax and wiping off while still wet. Then apply a fresh coat of wax.

If your dress is washable in a mild soap, that would be the surest way to remove the odor. Or if not washable and your garment is no longer new and you are willing to chance a method which might make it wearable, sponge just the underarm section with warm suds and rinse thoroughly. Place a folded towel under the section being sponged to protect the rest of the dress. Dry in open air.

Senators Told Of Gray Mart Steel Racket

By The Associated Press

A story of a gray market steel racket in which forged letters on stolen Bethlehem Steel Co. stationery are used to fleece would-be buyers was told yesterday by a Senate subcommittee and its counsel.

The Small Business subcommittee, which has been investigating the steel supply situation, said in a statement that Bethlehem officials gave it "the amazing story of theft of company letterheads and other material" from a Philadelphia sales office.

The statement added that the company had "no proof" of a connection between the theft and unsubstantiated "confirmation" of steel orders now showing up at various points, but it added:

"These confirmations are on Bethlehem letterheads and bear allegedly forged names of sales officials."

Raymond Dickey, chief counsel to the committee, told a reporter the men involved are from the East Coast, and he said the alleged scheme works this way:

Certain persons approach a would-be buyer of steel, show him a purported confirmation of an order on a Bethlehem letterhead. With this, they induce him to sign an "irrevocable and uncancelable" contract for steel at $110 a ton, saying, "We are not going to gouge you."

(The present normal mill price is approximately $80 a ton, but the committee has found evidence of many gray market transactions—those outside the regular market—in which prices ranged as high as $260.)

Some time after the contract is signed, Dickey continued, the self-styled brokers again approach the would-be purchaser and ask him for a nominal guarantee of $1 a ton as an indication of his ability to pay and as a forfeiture if he cancels the order.

The time of delivery is left indefinite, Dickey said, so that five years or so in the future the victim may be offered the steel for which he has contracted.

If in the meantime the price of steel drops to a normal of around $60 a ton, he continued, the victim will refuse to accept the $110 steel and forfeit his $1-a-ton deposit.

While the deposit appears to be small, Dickey said, the ring has already accepted orders for approximately one million tons and has collected at least $22,000 in deposits.

He said the steel company has made a considerable investigation of the racket and that the FBI has been called in.

Dickey urged that any firm approached to buy steel should "check immediately with the company" from which the steel is to come. "Otherwise they are likely to be left holding the bag," he said.

He said the ring using the stolen Bethlehem letterheads has written its purported letters of confirmation "in the way Bethlehem would normally write them," and signed the name of the sales official who would sign confirmations.

The signature appears to a layman to be genuine, he said, but the company has disclaimed it.

"I understand that the same official whose office was ransacked had some cancelled checks stolen at the same time," Dickey said. "That would enable them to copy his signature."

Senate Confirms New Texas Judge

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Representative R. Ewing Thomason (D., Tex.) to be a Federal district judge for western Texas.

The action was unanimous. Both Texas Senators Connally and O'Daniel, Democrats, who have been at odds on most Federal appointments for their State in recent months, had expressed approval of the Thomason nomination.

Thomason is expected to retain his seat in the House until adjournment of the present session of Congress.

THE DISTRICT LINE

by Bill Gold

Is The Bomb Still There?

SECURITY NOTE

Since the Atomic Energy Commission has moved into its new quarters in the Public Health building, security regulations have been rigidly tightened up.

Platoons of guards are all over the place, to make sure nothing is swiped. A visitor must sign in at the front door, then is conducted to the proper office by a guard, and may not leave that office without his guard.

When the visitor is ready to leave, the guard conducts him to the door, and again the register must be signed before the outsider is permitted to leave.

As I signed out the other day, cowering in the presence of all those guards, I remarked to the girl on duty:

"These are nice pens you have here."

"Yes," she replied, "but three of them have been stolen recently."

QUE STREET

Mrs. Anna Marcus, of Sandy Spring, Md., points out that there's a sound reason for spelling out "Que st."

She reminds us that many folks are taught to write "Q" to resemble an Arabic "2"— and the phonetic spelling therefore helps to avoid confusion.

C. W. T. postcards from Atlantic City to confirm Mrs. Marcus' explanation, and the clincher comes from Jack Low, of 1608 Que (have it your way) st. nw. Jack writes:

"At least twice a month we receive mail intended for 1608 2d st. nw. Why? Because the sender used the copy-book "Q," which resembles the digit "2."

Okay, okay—but I'll bet I have more fun being wrong than anybody in town.

SHADY SUGGESTION

Kenton L. Harris, of 4519 Alton pl. nw., thinks that N-1 bus riders could be a lot more comfortable if they'd use their noodles.

When they queue up at the 13th st. stop, the line is usually bathed by a broiling sun these summer afternoons. But if the folks up front would start the line in the other direction, most of it would be covered by shade instead.

OVERSIGHT

Memo to a local restaurant: The sign on your window says, "steak—one dollar." But your menu doesn't list any dollar steak. How come?

KING'S ENGLISH

Lynn Lucas, of 557 Lebaum st. se., sends along this gem for our collection of left-handed compositions:

"At the time of the disappearance of the Hesse crown jewels, Mrs. Durant was assigned to the Kronberg Castle, which had been converted into an American club as a mess officer."

PRONUNCIATION GUIDE

District Liner Kasper recently wanted to know about the pronunciation of local names. G. R. Cooley, of 4317 15th st. nw., gives this version:

"On the West Coast, it's Mount Rain-EER. In Washington it's Mount RAIN-yer. And it's KAL-mia Road. If you're an Englishman, you say Bucking-um, but we speak American here and pronounce all the syllables."

TOKENS

If I say "pretty please" will you send your tokens directly to Children's Hospital, 13th and W sts. nw., instead of to me? Thank you.

Incidentally, the hospital has now passed the 20,000 mark in tokens, and more than 4000 individual letters have been received.

The next time you hear somebody say "There's no civic spirit in Washington," let him have both barrels.

Grin and Bear It

"Life would be drab without them—but I guess that's one of the things you sacrifice when you have children . . ."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The bidding:

1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	2 ◇
3 ♣	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Q ◇.

By a cross ruff, here is how Charles G. Roth of Scarsdale describes today's play:

"The opening lead was the diamond queen. When this held the jack was continued. Declarer ruffed and led a club and West hopped up with his ace and exited with his last diamond, which declarer ruffed. The heart king disclosed the trump situation.

"Now South started to run his clubs and when West discarded a spade on the third round he cashed the spade king.

"Now declarer cross-ruffed the hand and West found himself in the unenviable position of being forced to underruff the last four tricks. South lost a diamond and a club, making four hearts with an overtrick.

"East speculated that repeated trump leads by West might have given declarer trouble, but this is not so. If West senses the cross-ruff and opens a trump, South will make six."

Declarer wins the trump lead in dummy and cashes the ace, king of spades, discarding a diamond from the closed hand. He leads a club to his king and West takes the ace, but he can't stop South from winning the rest of the tricks.

If West returns a trump, declarer wins the nine and leads out his clubs, discarding diamonds from the board. As soon as West is forced to ruff declarer overruffs with dummy's heart queen, returns to his hand by trumping a spade, and his remaining cards are good.

A diamond return by West leads to the same result. Declarer trumps and leads clubs. When West ruffs declarer overruffs on the board, draws trumps by leading dummy's last heart to his hand, and claims the balance.

The Hecht Co. Hails

Ice Cream Shoe

by GOLD RED CROSS

Harper's Bazaar heralds the return of the "ice-cream" shoe. The Hecht Co. helps you welcome back the wonderful white shoe with the fashionable assistance of Gold Cross (the checked, tested and fit-perfected footwear). What flavor will you have? Combination "vanilla and chocolate"—or "all vanilla"? These handsome shoes look as delectable and inviting as the frostiest ice cream soda you ever had. The white favorite with its heel and toe cupped in brown leather—or the entire contents in all white—applauded in Harper's Bazaar—hailed by The Hecht Co.
